What About Us?
When the Boom Does Come
Terrible Entering Wedge
A Home Free of Taxes

—By Arthur Brisbane—

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and Premier MacDonald will discuss war against depression "on a world-wide basis," seeking a plan that will help everybody, everywhere. A beautiful idea, all success to it.

But unfortunately we learned while lading out billions in loans, that foreign borrowers are too tired to repay, that things may be good for the outside world without being good for the United States.

It is to be hoped that somebody will concentrate on a fight against depression with an eye strictly to better conditions here in America.

We need better conditions HERE, not in Timbuctoo, and we pay the government several billions a year to keep its mind on that.—

Registration of automobiles last year dropped 6 per cent as compared with 1931. Nevertheless, 24,158,879 vehicles were registered, more than the total number of cars in all the world, outside the United States.

The modern automobile is a marvel of endurance, but it does wear out in time, largely because it is neglected when it is old. When prosperity comes back, and automobile buying begins in earnest, it will start with such a boom as the industry has never known.

It might mean a demand for ten million cars in one year, to replace worn out vehicles and supply the greatest of all modern demands—A NEW AUTOMOBILE.

Solemn Republicans in the Senate object violently to using the power plant at Muscle Shoals for the benefit of the people of the United States, who paid for the plant in good, fat, heavy taxation.

These Republicans say that permitting the people that own Muscle Shoals to operate the plant for their own benefit, with no rakeoff for private grafters, would be "the entering wedge to Socialistic government."

Republicans may be surprised to know how many such Socialistic steps the people of this country would approve, and MAY TAKE.

Rep. Rogers of Fort Lauderdale, puts on the House calendar of the Florida Legislature a constitutional amendment to "free from taxation all homesteads up to $5000 in value."

In Florida with this amendment a man could call the roof over his head actually his own with the ground under it and around it.

At present the average American house owner lives at the mercy of the tax gatherer.

If Florida tells the rest of the world "you can buy a house here for $5000 and own it forever, free of all taxes and assessments," there will follow an inrush of income earning citizens that will do more for the prosperity of Florida, more to bring in desirable residents, with fixed income, than all the work that all the chambers of commerce in the world could possibly do.

Texas has long been working on these lines. California should adopt the idea. With it, New Jersey could draw from New York and other neighboring states millions of desirable small income owning men and women. Think what it would mean if a man could say to his wife:

"No power on earth can ever take this home from you and the children."

University of Cincinnati doctors skiing high up in the Alps report that the low atmospheric pressure at such high altitudes increases the breathing and heart power to the arteries. One man in the party, barely able to walk at four miles, could endure violent physical exercise on the mountain tops.

That is important to you and all of us that now go through life near sea level, the full weight of the atmosphere pressing down upon us and depressing us, as the weight of water depresses deep sea fishes.

The airship will change all that, enabling men to live on the heights, flying to and from their homes, doing a short day's work on the lowlands, flying back for the night to the healthier heights.

A farmer in Southern Sweden dug up with his ploughshare a collection of silver articles, including 378 coins and rare gothic silver articles of great value. All have been bought by the government historical museum.

In ancient German days, as Goethe reminds you in the second part of Faust, buried treasure found went to the Emperor, except treasure turned over by the plough.

That wise rule caused the plough man to sink the ploughshare deeper than it would have gone ordinarily, increasing Germany's fertility and enabling farmers to pay in taxes much more than any plowed-up treasure would be worth.

The oldest title in Europe in the time of Voltaire, who called attention to it, descended from one of the criminals that took

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE TURNS UPON CURRENCY

Debt, Tariff Broached as Herriot, Bennett Join in Parleys

GOLD SITUATION

1—Roosevelt-MacDonald parley in Washington turns to discussion of means to have United States and Great Britain return to a new international gold standard and open way to disarmament.

2—London says Prime Minister MacDonald has been advised to tell President Roosevelt British returnrn to gold standard must be preceded by final settlement of war debts and lowering of America's tariff wall.

3—Edouard Herriot of France and Premier Bennett of Canada arrive to join in White House conversations.

4—Republicans ready to oppose vigorously the Roosevelt controlled inflation plan in the Senate today. Democrats confident it will pass.

5—First international congress on trade exchange opens in Paris with 40 countries represented.

6—Gold pours into the Bank of France as French cabinet sticks to gold standard. French holdings now estimated at $3,250,000,000 or 29 per cent of world's supply.

Washington, April 24—Proposals for the United States and Great Britain to return to a revised international gold standard and to open the way to real progress toward disarmament seemed to be uppermost in today's White House discussions of world problems.

The arrival of former Premier Edouard Herriot of France on the scene of these world-important negotiations threw the discussions into an advanced stage. Canada enter the picture today also with the coming of Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett.

For the first time, the topic of disarmament entered the Roosevelt-MacDonald conversations yesterday, and held their undivided attention in a seven-hour cruise down the Potomac.

HERRIOT AND WAR DEBTS

Then on their return they summoned their experts, who had been hard at work throughout the day and in a session that lasted until midnight they got down to dollars and cents in discussing the ratios at which America and Britain might return to a gold standard.

On both of these points the views of France were awaited before reaching any conclusions.

The French statesmen, who took up his residence at a hotel, was invited to the White House today

Britain Demands Final War Debt Settlement

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

(Copyright, 1933. Distributed by Universal Service, Inc.)

London, April 24—Prime Minister MacDonald is understood to have been advised to tell President Roosevelt that any British decision on a return to the gold standard must be preceded by final settlement of war debts and lowering of America's tariff wall.

Furthermore, Britain wants a moratorium on the war debt instalment due in June until this final settlement is reached.

This, it is learned, represents British treasury opinion, which has hardened, rather than weakened, since President Roosevelt's gold embargo. It is the plain and blunt exposition of the British case which has been recommended to MacDonald for presentation to Roosevelt.

If MacDonald agrees in Washington—whether formally or informally—to anything less than these drastic demands, he is in danger of a revolt from his leadership in Parliament, an important parliamentarian said.

Roosevelt's embargo action has made necessary quicker international action on the gold standard and a new gold coverage ratio for world currencies will eventually result, he added.

America will have to go a little bit off the present ratio, Britain a little bit on and France and the other nations will have to fall in line somewhere in between.

As a matter of fact, a high authority said, the United States and England are still on a "second-hand" gold standard and both could go back tomorrow. By lifting the gold embargo, he said, both would have a good supply of gold.

FIREBUG HUNT IN BLAZE IN WINTHROP

Man Seen Running From Block Where 20 Were Imperilled

A firebug, suspected of setting the $35,000 blaze which swept an apartment block at Quincy and Cliff aves., Winthrop Highlands, last night, from which a score of persons narrowly escaped, 10 being injured, was being sought by police today.

Officials said they had received reports that a man was seen running from the cellar of the building shortly before flames broke out. Preliminary investigation revealed the blaze had apparently started in the cellar and worked through the building by way of air shafts and stairways.

LEAPS FROM WINDOWS

The fire spread rapidly and the flames gained such headway that occupants of upper floors leaped from windows to the ground or made their way down on ropes improvised from sheets. Several were injured in their leaps or suffered burns in sliding down the makeshift ropes.

One of the most spectacular rescues was that of the family of John Murphy, residents of the second floor. Trapped in their apartment, Murphy lowered his wife from a window and let her drop uninjured, to the ground. She then held out a blanket and he dropped their two children into it. He then lowered himself from the window.

William Dalton helped his wife and small daughter to safety in the same manner, and then escaped himself. Mrs. Elizabeth Moore of Revere st., Winthrop, who was visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. Lawrence Burns, was severely injured when she leaped from a third floor window. She suffered fractures of both legs and is in a critical condition at Ford Banks Hospital. She will be examined for possible fracture of the spine.

SECTION ENDANGERED

Mrs. Burns also leaped from the window, but suffered only from shock and a bruised arm.

Others injured included Lorraine White, 8, fractured arm; Samuel Asher, fractured arm; Mrs. Samuel Asher, fractured leg; William B. Thorne, his wife, Florence, and two daughters, Barbara, 19 months, and Marjorie, 3 months, burns of the face and hands when Walnwright, strained back and smoke inhalation.

Several other residents suffered minor burns and from the effects of smoke inhalation. They were treated by physicians living in the section. Many of the 60 odd residents of the house made their own way to safety while others were assisted by neighbors and firemen.

The entire high lands section was endangered by flying sparks and hundreds were attracted to the scene for a considerable distance. Aid was summoned from Revere to assist the Winthrop firemen. They battled for two hours before bringing the fire under control.

Dodging Their Duty

TO the Editor of Boston Evening American:

I think we should have a series of editorials insisting that Congress resign and allow the people to elect a Congress which has the capacity and the disposition to perform its functions under the Constitution.

The people admire Mr. Roosevelt very much, but they admire him as a President, not as a dictator.

Congress is going contrary to the registered vote of the people, and contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, and contrary to the purposes of the founders of this republican form of government when it shirks its own duties, abandons its functions, and turns its powers over to the President.

Mr. Roosevelt is a good President, and he might not abuse these powers; but the wisdom of the founders contemplated the possibility of a bad President, who would misuse powers which were too largely entrusted to him.

* * *

THEY created a government of three co-equal branches; the executive branch, the legislative branch, and the judicial branch.

They defined the powers of each, and they took pains to see that one branch should not encroach upon the powers of another.

There is nothing in the character of the present Congress to lead anyone to suppose that they have more wisdom than the founders of this government.

In fact the abandonment of the powers of Congress, who are the most direct representatives of the people, is not based on any worthy motive.

It is due in the main to cowardice as well as incompetence. If there is anything to be done which obviously ought to be done in the interests

'King' Hunt Linked to Gustin Gang Search

Thomas "Red" Curran and James Lynch, whose temporary arrest in New York combined the search for slayers of Charlie "King" Solomon with the hunt for Steve "Gustin" Wallace in the attack on Special Officer Daniel J. McDonald, today were under the watchful eyes of police informers here.

Both were in a South End hangout while Sergt. James V. Crowley worked with New York police in a combined search for Wallace; his chauffeur, Frank Sullivan, and the five sought for killing Solomon.

Lynch is a brother-in-law of James Scully, who is sought with Frank Karlonas, John J. Burke and James P. "Skeets" Coyne for the Cotton Club slaying of Solomon.

Curran is on bail as "star witness" against Wallace and Sullivan in the assault that nearly brought death to Special Officer McDonald.

Because Curran allowed himself to be bailed when Police considered his life might be in danger and then joined Coyne in New York, police believe the Solomon slaying was the result of a move for funds to finance the defense of Wallace.

The presence of the two in New York was considered a meeting with both of the sought groups for some sort of underworld "deal."

Seek Three in Woods After Shots Fly in Petting Area

South Hadley, April 24—State troopers armed with riot guns beat the woods about the Hockanum Road section early today in a hunt for three men who staged a revolver battle with a trooper after a midnight petting party holdup.

The troops were summoned from barracks in Monson, Russell, Northampton and Shelburne Falls, after Trooper Patrick Butler of Northampton exchanged six shots with the bandits.

The trio had successfully staged three holdups before a motorist notified Trooper Butler that bandits who have terrorized the section for several weeks were at work again.

Police were convinced the bandits were still in the woods when 25 troopers were ordered in the hunt. Several hours after daylight they had achieved no success in finding them however.

WALL STREET LEADERS SPLIT ON ROOSEVELT PLAN

ACTIVE MARKET SEEN AS AID TO BUSINESS

Inflation Move May Scare England and France, Says Leader

New York, April 24 (INS)—President Roosevelt's "controlled inflation" program has Wall Street talking.

Many well-informed New York financiers expressed confidence today that the President is on the right track in his fight to rout the depression. Others voiced frank disapproval of his inflationary move.

LEADERS SPLIT ON PLAN

A rift has developed in a number of financial families.

A. P. Whitney, one of the economists of the Chase National Bank, told International News Service that generally speaking there are two schools of thought in the financial district:

1—The brokers, who are pleased because the stock market has turned active.

2—The bankers, who as a class have been against inflation and are now cagy about committing themselves.

How soon business will feel the effects of inflation depends upon developments in Washington, according to Whitney.

"If prices do not rise, the Roosevelt administration might go further in their inflation plans. The government might, for example, spend billions of dollars in public works and pay for this in newly authorized greenbacks. Then prices no doubt would rise."

Two favorable factors in the inflationary movement were pointed out by Whitney, namely:

FROZEN LOANS FLOATED

"It might throw a scare into England, and possibly France, to induce them to stabilize fluctuating currencies and join in a movement to reduce tariffs and if it (inflated) raises prices it will float a lot of loans which now seem to be frozen. Prices of real estate should advance. Prices of second grade domestic bonds would rise. This would help the banks and insurance companies and conceivably might help in the re-opening of banks and save banks from going under."

HITLERITES WIN KEY ELECTION IN AUSTRIA

Innsbruck Victory Points to National Situation

Innsbruck, Austria, April 24 (AP)—The Austrian National Socialists, who acclaimed allegiance to Chancellor Hitler of Germany, have added another triumph to their string of municipal and provincial election victories, greatly strengthening their argument for new national elections.

The municipal election in this Tyrolean capital gave them nine seats in the council in which they previously had none. They have no seats in the national parliament, now suspended, and there has been no election since November, 1930.

Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss considered the voting here so important in relation to the future of Austria that he came here personally to aid his Christian Social (Catholic) party. His efforts were vain, for the party lost its clear majority and now must combine with the Nazis to continue ruling.

The Christian Social party won five seats, giving them a total of 12. The Socialists won six, bringing their total to 15. The Pan-Germans retain four seats.

The Heimwehr (Home Guard), a Fascist organization with monarchist leanings, has combined with the Nazis in Styria. The Heimwehr has eight seats in the Parliament, which was suspended when Chancellor Dollfuss assumed dictatorial powers immediately after the Nazi celebrations of Hitler's election victory in Germany.

BRITONS HINT COMRADES TO BE RELEASED

Lift of Anglo-Soviet Trade Embargo Would Result

London, April 24 (AP)—Statements and actions of British engineers tried in Moscow on charges of espionage and sabotage and later released have strengthened a belief that their imprisoned comrades in Moscow soon will be freed.

Allan Monkhouse, leader of the group, intimated he expected such action in declaring, "We shall not speak publicly on this matter until our colleagues are back again in England."

Shortly after the released engineers arrived here, another incident spurred expectations of early freedom for the other Britons, possibly in time to avert the threatened economic war between Great Britain and Russia.

John Cushny, one of the engineers, called on Mrs. L. C. Thornton, wife of one of the pair held in prison, to give her a secret message. Mrs. Thornton, who had been almost prostrated by news of the sentences, said afterward:

"It may not be so hopeless after all."

If Thornton and William MacDonald, the imprisoned Britons, are released and deported, British embargo probably will be called off immediately. In that event, Russia is expected to withdraw combative measures.

Monkhouse, Cushny and C. H. Nordwall, all of whom were ordered to leave Russia, and A. W. Gregory, who was acquitted in the trial, were the engineers who arrived here.

to meet the President for whose courage and ability he said he had already formed a keen admiration.

Disarmament was to figure largely in this first conversation between the Herriot and the president. While the results of the long discussion of the subject between MacDonald and Roosevelt were not made known, it was believed they had decided upon a plan in which French co-operation would be sought to save the Geneva arms conference from failure.

A likelihood also was seen that the matter of war debt revision would be broader by Herriot.

BENNETT AND TARIFF

The arrival of Bennett, Canadian prime minister, probably will mark the beginning of efforts at negotiating tentative agreements on mutual tariff advantages.

With MacDonald's departure on Wednesday, Bennett will move from the Canadian legation to the White House to stay until his departure from Washington Friday.

Herriot's first appointment with the President was for tea, and they were to meet again after dinner for an informal talk of the type Mr. Roosevelt and MacDonald have been having.

The British prime minister had a breakfast date today with Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, former chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

ARMS PROPOSALS TIMELY

Discussion of disarmament at today's conferences will be timely. Following an Easter recess, the Geneva conference is taking up as a basis for its discussion the proposal made a few weeks ago by MacDonald, but received coolly at that time by the French delegates.

It provided for reducing the armies of Europe to definite figures—France 200,000 and 200,000 more for its overseas possessions; Germany 200,000 double what it is allowed under the Versailles treaty; Poland, France's ally, 200,000; Italy 200,000 and 30,000 more for its overseas; Russia 500,000 and Czechoslovakia, another ally of France.

Most important from the standpoint of the United States was a "security" provision under which signatories of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact would agree to consult together in case of a violation or a threatened breach of its solemn pledge against war.

FRENCH SECURITY

This has been interpreted as a move to satisfy the French demand for guarantees of their security against attack. While the Democratic platform provided for adding consultative provisions to the pact, the Roosevelt administration thus far has taken no action although it is carefully watching public opinion and the attitude of Congress.

On the matter of the proposed new gold standard parities, the French attitude was looked upon here as vastly important.

After the meeting of the President, Mr. MacDonald and their experts last night, this joint statement was issued by the White House:

"The President and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald had a further meeting this evening at which the Secretary of State, the British ambassador and American and British experts were present. Some of the subjects generally outlined at Saturday's meeting were explored in further detail. The discussions centered around the monetary aspects of the agenda of the world economic conference.

"After a helpful exchange of views it was arranged that a further discussion between the experts should take place at the office of the Secretary of State on Monday morning at 11 preliminary to a further conference conference with the President and Mr. MacDonald on Monday afternoon at 3:30."

of the whole country, but which nevertheless might jeopardize the seat of some Congressman, these Congressmen can almost certainly be found regarding the situation from a point of view of their own interests and not from the point of view of the nation's interests.

Consequently these Congressmen decline to do the rightful thing and prefer instead to turn the powers of Congress over to the President, with the purpose of letting him do it and take the consequences.

* * *

A CONGRESS of such cowardly and incompetent character is unworthy to represent the people of the United States.

It is willing, in order to save itself some onerous obligations, to try to make a dictator out of the Executive, to upset the balance of the co-equal branches of government which the fathers of the Republic provided for in the Constitution of the nation, and to establish evil precedents which may return to plague us, and possibly to destroy the democratic character of our government, if at some future time a less worthy and less unselfish Executive should occupy the presidential chair.

We have, in fact, the singular spectacle and the disturbing situation of a Democratic Congress which does not believe in democracy; and which furthermore does not apparently believe in the fundamental principles of republican government on which this nation is founded.

It is idle to hope that this Congress will resign; but an amendment to the Constitution should be offered which would enable the voters to recall Congressmen who are incapable of performing properly and constitutionally the duties of their office.

STATE CHURCH MOVE FOUGHT

Berlin, April 24 (UB)—A nation-wide religious conflict cast its shadow over Germany today with the question of whether the Protestant church shall maintain its present independence or become a government instrument the grave issue.

The Protestant Church Council has appealed to President Von Hindenburg against reorganization of the church in accordance with Nazi ideals, now in progress in the State of Mecklenburg.

Numerous manifestos from various church organizations protest sacrifice of German Protestantism's independence. Running counter to radical Nazi demands for a "German Christianity" are the plans of another reformatory group for establishment of a "state church."

Such a church would resemble the English Episcopal, with the president of the State at its head. Opponents point out this might eventually make Hitler head of the church, since he is expected eventually to succeed Von Hindenburg.

The time has not yet come for a new proclamation restoring the republic, the president said, and its proponents must contain themselves with the declaration that it is for that goal they strive.

The speech followed a procession through the principal streets of Dublin to the barracks. A memorial tablet was unveiled at the Mount Street Bridge commemorating eight Republicans who were killed in a fight with British troops there in 1916.

POULTRY CZAR IS HUNTED

New York, April 24 (INS)—Police and detectives today pressed a hunt through the Bronx for a reputed racketeer czar, alleged to have muleted live poultry dealers of $50,000 weekly as four members of a live poultry distributing firm huddled in the county jail, refusing bail for fear of death or injury at the hands of thugs charged with coercing poultry dealers.

The astounding picture of an entire industry under complete domination of a racket king was traced by Charles F. Brodie, chief clerk for Bronx District Attorney Samuel Foley, who last night declared war on the racketeers.

The four fearful jail inmate are material witnesses against seven alleged thugs scheduled to go on trial next Friday on charges of wrecking the S. S. and B. Live Poultry Corp. when the company refused to "go along" with the racketeers.

Homes of all four men were placed under police guard early today as authorities began their hunt for the reputed racket czar.

The "czar," whose identity authorities would not divulge, although they said they knew it, was said to have maintained a "force of hired gorillas," to enforce his commands.

VACCINE GIVEN TO 2000

Methuen, April 24—Residents here are being inoculated against danger of infection from a supposedly polluted well in the Lone Tree section. A corps of physicians treated 2000 persons at Town Hall yesterday.

Officials said the temporary clinic would reopen for further inoculations at 10 a. m. today. A steady stream poured in for treatment all day yesterday. Many were waiting in line when treatments were started at 9 a. m., and the last applicant was not finished until after 8 p. m.

Dr. Gaylord W. Anderson, who is directing the work, sent several doctors to St. Ann's Orphange, and 300 children there were inoculated.

The oldest family in Egypt, thousands of years older than any pharoah, is a parasite that afflicts more than 65 per cent of all Egyptians. This strange living being has its residence in various snails, leaves their bodies to enter the bodies of human beings, producing cancer, dysentery, many other diseases. Dr. Farlow of the Rockefeller Foundation hopes that he has found a way to get rid of the snails which would mean getting rid of the "flat worm" that causes the disease in human beings.

The eggs of the worm have been found in mummies 4000 years old and the disease dates back to the late Stone Age. Its carriers are "one of our oldest families."

Girl Turns to Terrier for Protection as Police Fail

Miss Rose Fallon, of Zeigler st., Roxbury, who alleged she was assaulted a month ago in a Lexington roadhouse, today gave up hopes of police aid and turned to a Boston terrier for protection.

Boston police referred her to Lexington when she reported the assault a week late. She had reported to Boston to charge that a member of the Gustin gang had administered the beating.

Lexington police said she never reported the alleged affair.

"I only wish that 'Ted' (her Boston terrier), had been with me that night at the roadhouse, He wouldn't have let that man hit me," Miss Fallon said.

She added that she knew the name and address of the man who beat her, but at the time of the assault she knew him only by a nickname.

Both Miss Fallon and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Fallon, expressed a fear today that gangsters might do some harm when the news reached them that Miss Fallon has again visited police.

That is the reason she plans to have the dog accompany her wherever she goes.

DOCTOR TENANT OF HUSBAND WHO CALLED HIM LOVE THIEF

HOME FIGURES IN ALIENATION SUIT PACT

Mill Beauty Calls Her Bridegroom's Suit 'A Dirty Trick'

Ipswich, April 24—Because he alienated the affections of Mrs. Martha Carter Roy, the town's prettiest mill worker, Dr. Frank L. Collins has become a tenant of Mrs. Roy's husband in the house he once owned.

The strange turn came about in a transfer of the doctor's house, garage and land to Alfred Roy, Beverly wall paper salesman, in settlement of an alienation suit filed three years ago by Roy.

LETTERS AS EXHIBITS

Announcement of the peculiar settlement came from Attorney William B. Welch of Salem through whom the property was transferred as counsel for Roy.

Roy was married only a month when he filed the alienation suit. He declared at that time that letters alleged to have been written by Dr. Collins to Mrs. Roy were held as important exhibits.

Mrs. Roy, before her marriage, was a boarder at the home of Dr. Collins. The doctor is on the staff of Ipswich Hospital and lives with his wife and four children.

He does not intend to be a tenant living in the new house of the aggrieved husband, his present plans including the rental of a small cottage on Eagles Hill, Welch said.

"DIRTY TRICK," SHE SAYS

Mrs. Roy is still at work in an Ipswich mill and will soon face a divorce suit, Welch said.

She denied that the physician alienated her affections in any way. In comment on the three-year-old suit she said:

"It was a dirty trick that I wouldn't have anything to do with."

Exhausted Pigeon Awaits Owner

The owner of a carrier pigeon, who carries the banking "1464-A U-33-Hub" on its legband, is being sought today.

The bird, apparently exhausted after a lengthy flight, dropped onto a window sill at the home of Peter Lugon in Harrison ave., Roxbury, early last night.

"UNITED EUROPE BACKS ROOSEVELT"---HERRIOT

Edouard Herriot, dynamic former premier of France whose government crashed because of the failure of the French chamber of deputies to carry out his demand to pay the United States the war debt due last year, is shown here as he voiced his greeting to America over the radio on landing at New York.

"A united Europe, willing and anxious to co-operate with President Roosevelt for the success of the world economic conference" was the word of cheer the doughty little French leader, here as the French delegate to Roosevelt's economic conference, sent over the air to millions of listeners.

ARLINGTON MAN KIDNAPED IN DYE RACKET

Police Fear Bliss, Found on Cape, Victim of Gang

Police of Arlington were torn today between theories of a dye house "protection" racket and a nervous breakdown in the reported abduction of Lawrence P. Bl Bliss, 31, Harvard and Technology graduate and head of an Arlington dye business.

Bliss staggered into the arms of a State trooper at Norwell and reported that he had been abducted from his Arlington shop on Friday.

KIDNAPED BY FOUR

Early today his dazed condition prevented police from getting a connected story of what happened.

In substance, Bliss said that four men drove up to his shop Friday, after they had visited him the day previously, and talked of new machinery for his plant.

One of the men talked with him in the shop and then induced him to join the others at the curb. At that point he was hit over the head and bundled into the truck, Bliss said.

The auto drove from Arlington through Boston and onward to Cape Cod, but he was unable to recall events that immediately followed the attack, according to the story.

FOUND NEAR FARM

He said his first recollection was getting his direction in Plymouth and working his way back to a farm owned by his father, Edwin P. Bliss, prominent in Malden church circles.

It was near the farm that he was seen by State Trooper Edward L. McGinley. The latter took him to Dr. James C. Lukers of Hanover, who announced Bliss suffering from hysteria.

Police hope to question him late today on any proposals that might have been made for "protection" of his plant by gangsters.

Homesick, So He Quits Forest Army

Fort Devens, April 24—Sidney Berkman of Cunningham st., Roxbury, is being allowed to return to his home from the Civilian Conservation Corps here today, homesickness being assigned as the reason. He is the second of the Boston contingent to feel these pangs, one leaving Saturday.

WINNIE JUDD TO LEAVE DEATH CELL TODAY

Trunk Slayer's Only Concern Is Over Care of Kittens

Florence, Ariz., April 24—Winnie Ruth Judd, double trunk murderess, today leaves the little stone house in the women's yard at the Arizona State Prison for a cool white-walled room in the State Hospital at Phoenix.

Her departure for the hospital was delayed for a day awaiting the signing of commitment papers that will place the final seal on the verdict of the jury which found the slayer of Agnes Anne Leon and Hedvig Samuelson insane.

And Warden A. G. Walker wants to give Mrs. Judd's tired nerves and sick brain an opportunity to rest from the long strain of eight days of court session before she is moved from the prison even to the shelter of the hospital.

Whether or not Mrs. Judd yet understands that the shadow of the gallows has been lifted from her or why she is going to the State Hospital is a question that not even the prison officials can answer.

After she had been told again and again that the jury had brought in its verdict and her hearing was over she was still talking about staying in the prison.

She asked visitors to help her find a home for three of her treasured kittens, explaining that five cats would be too many to keep in the limited quarters.

Prison matrons are still keeping a close watch over Mrs. Judd and will not relax their care until she is safely in the hospital. In Florence approval of the jury's verdict was general. Only a few persons still argued that Mrs. Judd should be hanged.

Missing Attorney's Body Is Recovered

Portsmouth, R. I., April 24 (AP)—The body of James Ira Shepard, Providence attorney, who disappeared Dec. 30, was found by two fishermen on Common Fence Point, where it had washed ashore.

Shepard's automobile was found abandoned on the Mt. Hope Bridge, connecting Portsmouth and Bristol, the morning of Dec. 30.

ESTATE WILLED TO CHAUFFEUR

Washington, April 24 — Mrs. Martha Hichborn Pearsall, daughter of the late Admiral Hichborn and first wife of James C. Bidle, Jr., left her entire fortune to her chauffeur, Winter B. Simpson, it was learned today following the filing of her will. Mrs. Pearsall died last Thursday.

To her nephew and adopted son, Philip Hichborn, Mrs. Pearsall left nothing, explaining he had been sufficiently provided for.

Young Hichborn, a recent Harvard graduate, is the son of Mrs. Pearsall's late brother, Philip S. Hichborn, who committed suicide when the boy's mother, postess daughter of Henry M. Hoyt, solicitor-general in the Taft administration, eloped with a postal clerk in 1909.

After her brother's suicide, Mrs. Pearsall, then a belle of capital society, adopted the infant. The child's mother married the postal clerk, Herbert Wylie, and under the name of Eleanor Wylie became a prolific writer of verse and prose.

In 1926 she married William Rose Benet, himself a poet and brother of Stephen V. Benet, author of "John Brown's Body."

Shortly afterward she died in Greenwich Village of a sudden paralytic stroke.

Rev. Brougher Flays Wife Deserters

Boston today has one man to whom a wife deserter need not turn for sympathy.

He is the Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, who discussed such men in his Sunday night talk at Tremont Temple.

"There is one Hell hotter than another, I believe the hottest will be for the man who, unhappy in his own family, tries to secure happiness in the destruction of his neighbor's," Rev. Brougher said.

Melrose Students Face Longer Hours

Melrose High pupils will attend sessions for an hour longer starting next year with the opening of the new Melrose High school building on the Lynn Fells parkway.

The lengthened session will allow an extensive physical education program on the adjoining athletic field, will give additional study periods to pupils in study halls and will permit teachers to handle larger classes, thereby reducing the cost of operating (he school a considerable amount.

17 RESCUED IN BOAT BLAST

New York, April 24 (AP)—Seventeen men and women, some of whom were severely burned, were rescued from the waters of Great South bay after they had jumped or been thrown from a flaming fishing boat, the Zangara.

Fire started when a gasoline stove exploded. Vincent Minella said his sister, Frances, were thrown through the cabin into the water. Flames quickly enveloped the craft and all but two of the 15 others aboard leaped into the water. The boy was dotted with shots of various kinds, all of which hastened to the rescue. Fishermen aboard the Mildred went alongside the flaming Zangara and took off two passengers who remained huddled in the bow, fearing to jump.

Economic Conferees Breakfast on Bay State Halibut

Washington, April 24—President Roosevelt and his guest, Prime Minister MacDonald, of England, breakfasted today on a 54-pound halibut, the gift of the crew of the Gloucester fishing schooner, Gertrude L. Thebaud.

The huge fish was presented by the crew of veteran fishing skippers, who are here to present their plea for the fishing industry to the President, to Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday afternoon when she boarded the schooner at the navy yard dock for an inspection tour.

President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and Prime Minister MacDonald were returning from a yachting trip aboard the Sequoia and as they came to the dock, the President ordered his car stopped. He and the prime minister waited while Mrs. Roosevelt went aboard and talked with the grizzled veterans of the New England fishing waters.

The veteran fishermen revealed their plight here last night. They declared the fishing industry was being scuttled by foreign countries who were underselling them and paying their own fishermen almost nothing.

They declared American fishermen were being driven from the seas. Many Gloucester boats last summer were used only to ferry foreign fish to American shores, the claim.

They will present their plea to President Roosevelt sometime today. They will also confer with the New England delegations from the Senate and House.

Gingri, publisher of the Winslow Daily Mail, and Jack Irish, airplane pilot, missing since they left Monday on a business trip for Phoenix, were found in the charred wreckage of their plane on West Sunset Mountain, 18 miles southwest of Winslow.

Police found the bodies, after sighting the wreckage of a plane about 100 yards from a seldom used road.

RADIO PRIEST FLAYS BOOKS

New York, April 24—Obscene books were flayed and the gold standard was derided today by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin of the Detroit Shrine of the Little Flower, in addressing 2500 members of the Holy Name Society of the New York fire department.

The fiery radio priest, who was guarded during his stay in the city by detectives from the Communist squad, said the chief ills of the world were due to the greed for gold and the loss of spiritual ideals. He said:

"Sixty-three per cent of our people belong to no church, and we are shown to be one of the greatest pagan nations in the world. We have more educational institutions per square mile than any other country, but we have exhibited less spiritual progress than any other people possibly outside Russia.

"I have in my suitcase 17 magazines that can be bought on any street corner in New York or Kankakee. It is my intention to make use of them in an important mission tomorrow."

Of the gold standard he said:

"Gold worship has produced a condition in the world almost stupefying. Since 1887 one-fifth of the world has been on the so-called gold standard. We have sealed all our trade plans to this standard, unmindful of other countries that think in terms of silver.

"Nature has asserted itself to take care of our sins."

Canoeist Drowns Despite Pals' Aid

Hubbardston, Mass., April 24 (AP)—Alvin D. Matthews, 24, of Gardner is dead, despite the valiant efforts of his two companions.

Matthews was canoeing on Streeter's pond with Raymond Maio and Harold Streeter, when the canoe capsized. Matthews went down. Fully clothed, Maio and Streeter descended into the chilly depths of the pond time and again until one of them found the inert form of his friend. Resuscitation efforts failed.

MOONEY CASE TO SUPREME COURT

San Francisco, April 24—The famous Mooney case will be laid before the United States Supreme Court for the first time, regardless of the outcome of the trial of Mooney on the remaining murder indictment growing out of the Preparedness Day bombing. The trial will begin here Wednesday.

This strategy of the defense was indicated on the arrival here of Frank P. Walsh, veteran labor lawyer and chief of Mooney's counsel. Walsh announced the entrance of John F. Finnerty, civil lawyer of Washington, D. C., into Mooney's defense.

Finnerty is one of the most frequent and successful pleaders before the highest court of the land. He is expected here today.

If Mooney is convicted on the old indictment an appeal would immediately be taken to the Supreme Court. If he is acquitted a pardon would be asked of Governor Rolph. Failing to receive it, an appeal would be taken on the conviction which sent Mooney to San Quentin 15 years ago.

INVENTION-A-NECESSITY

Because he was out of work and needed money, Robert Andrews of West Brookline st., South End, got busy to see what he could do that would mean money in his pocket. Here you see the result of his heavy thinking. He and a friend, Chester Smith, are now manufacturers of bronze plates, in which is inserted a card. They sell them to business men to place on their doors. It tells where and who to notify in case of emergency. (Boston American Photo.)

FAKE COIN MEN TAKEN IN R. I.

Providence, April 24 (AP)—Providence police last night arrested three New York men who, police say, admitted they had passed over $50 in counterfeit $1 bills in this city. The men were trailed to a rooming house by police, after many proprietors of small stores had complained of receiving the bogus bills.

The men gave their names as Edward Rey, 26, of East 20th st.; John Moss, 30, of West 17th st., and James McEarney, 26, of East 20th st. They were turned over to federal secret service operatives.

Police say the trio told them they had paid $35 for $100 in counterfeit bills in New York, and had passed some of the bills there before coming to Providence.

Sparrow Killed in Bird Triangle

Clovis, N. M., April 10 (AP)—Belief a bird love triangle might have been back of the recent hanging of John Sparrow from the limb of an elm tree outside his office window was expressed by District Judge Harry L. Patton.

The evidence (purely circumstantial):

The widowed mate has resumed her home-building with a new husband. John helped Mollie start a home. Then one morning Judge Patton found John dangling on a string, one end of which had been fastened inside the nest.

The jurist said it appeared as if the bird might have been pushed from the nest "to get rid of him."

In Mollie's behalf, it might be said that she tugged at the string more than a day in an effort to release her mate.

Character Needed, Conclave Is Told

Plymouth, N. H., April 24 (AP)—David L. Martin of Boston, founder of the American Society, told the New Hampshire Annual Conference of the Methodist-Episcopal Church that "what the country needs most is less education of first class minds backed by second class character."

He said there had been no bank failures in China in the past 100 years and the reason was that when a bank failed in China the officials were taken out and shot.

Francis R. Fay, Yonkers attorney, appointed as Helen's guardian, said he was convinced that Mrs. Vasko would give formal consent to the operation today.

LINDBERGHS AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, April 24 (AP)—A smiling eagle of the airways—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh—landed here with Mrs. Lindbergh, by airplane, from St. Louis, completing the 230-mile flight with a gesture of aerial courtesy.

Lindbergh's plane was sighted over the Kansas City Airport last night just one hour and 31 minutes after it left St. Louis. He remained aloft seven minutes, circling the field. The colonel explained on landing he did not set his plane down immediately because he wished to permit a tri-motored passenger and mail plane, which arrived at the same time, to precede him safely to earth. The Flying Colonel said he planned to remain here two or three days.

Precedents Are Dropped

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Are you all set for some new history lessons this week?

Envoy Herriot arrived yesterday and was greeted by Premier Ramsay MacDonald, an old established resident of three days.

They go into executive in the White House, which is now a red hot oven for international biscuits.

Anything can happen these days. There have been cloudbursts in the Sahara, we once saw a runaway Texas steer in midocean and we have actually lived to see a keg of beer in a restaurant window.

These items are proof that Washington has ripped the lid off precedent and exposed it to the blistering glare of the noonday sun.

History has been given a close shave and a shampoo with sandpaper. The man with a daily newspaper is one lap ahead of the librarian with a million books.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

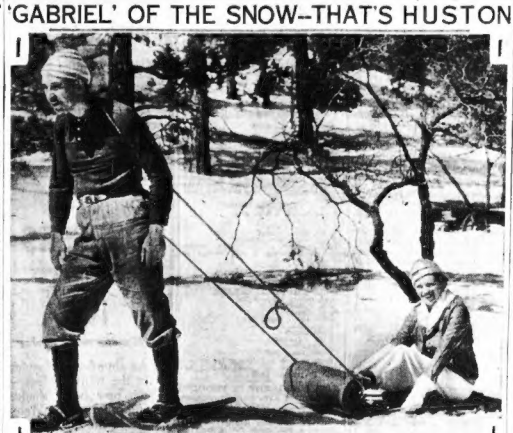
For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. A nice often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up. They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. ©1933 C. M. Co.

'GABRIEL' OF THE SNOW—THAT'S HUSTON



Here you see Walter Huston, screen notable, whose job as "President of the United States," in "Gabriel Over The White House," has attracted the nation, is resting far away from filmland. You see Huston and Mrs. Huston in the hills of California with real snow and real trees, as background. Not a bad spring sport this tobaggan stunt.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Down Memory Lane!

(With Bette Davis)

I remember. I remember the house where I was born. It was in Lowell, Mass. And it was there that I acquired a Way Down East pronounciation that a little later proved one of my many theatrical handicaps. A party—wild or otherwise—became a "pahty" in my vernacular, and not even Rudy Valles could say "Havahd" more flatly in referring to Harvard.

I lived through a sufficient number of years of brown bread and beans to arrive at scholastic age, and was packed off to various New England educational institutions. The one I remember best is Cushing Academy, conducted at the time by Dr. and Mrs. Cowell. It remains in my memory for two reasons. For it was at Cushing that I made two decisions. One to be an actress, the other to marry Harmon O. Nelson, Jr. I've done both.

Cushing was co-ed, and Harmon, one of the students, sang a fascinating tenor then as he does now. I had a singing part in one of the school shows, and he rehearsed me. He was so darned indifferent I swore I'd make him take notice. He did—eight years later.

There were no actors in the family, and we were all puzzled about my love for the theater and my yen to be an actress. It remained for my uncle, Dr. Paul Gordon Favor, rector of the New Rochelle Episcopal Church, to unearth the deep, dark secret. During a sojourn in France he found that my mother's family name, Favor, is in reality a corruption of the Gallic, Le Fevre, and that all our branch had been troupers for generations. With such a heritage what can a poor girl do?

Well, what I did, even before I left school, was to apprentice myself to the famous dancer, Roshisara, and as her protege to study her art. Her untimely death stifled my dancing ambitions, although to this day I'd love to play musical comedy. Some time I shall. In any event, I came to New York and gained access to Eve Le Gallienne. Miss Le Gallienne had me read the part of an old Dutch woman before she decided I wasn't her type. Not sufficiently serious, she said.

So I went to John Murray Anderson, worked like blue blazes and won a scholarship. Also learned to fall down stairs convincingly gracefully and with the proper abandon. This is an important memory for George Cukor, since gone Hollywood like all of us, took me up to Rochester for a small part in "Broadway" upon the word of Frank Conway. My mother, a delightfully uncanny person whose hunches are 100 per cent, said, "Bette, if you're not a perfect idiot you'll learn both the big girl parts. Some day one of the girls playing them will sprain an ankle or something."

Sure enough, the girl who played "Pearl" was injured. I told Mr. Cukor I knew the lines, convinced him by doing the down-stairs fall realistically, and played the part. I remember I chewed gum in an effort to be tough. And was I embarrassed in the scant costume.

I never had any luck with agents. They seem to look at me and say, "Nice little girl and what of it." My breaks have come through friends, and through me. One of them was down at the Provincetown when I played "Penthesilea" in Virgil Geddes' play, "The Earth Reverent." There was no other premiere that night and we got all the first string critics. That was a thrill. I remember "Sinjin" Erving rapping the seats—in his review, I mean. That was a real "thinking part." The play was all thought—and few lines.

A rocky stretch in my memory lane was reached when an ambition to play "Hedwig" in "The Wild Duck" was offered by Blanche Yurka. I came down with measles the same afternoon. Run measles or no, I opened. And if you think it's fun to act with measles . . . you're wrong as some gossip columns.

I don't remember seeing a silent picture. Staid New Englanders didn't regard the cinema any too well in those days. I do remember my first play, though. It was "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the Castle Square Theater in Boston and Donald Meek was in it. Later we played seven months of Broadway in "Broken Dishes."

It was during the run of "Dishes" that Hollywood became Davis-conscious, and Davis' pals became Hollywood conscious. I'd taken a Paramount test a year before—and had seen it. That's why I was no more interested than Paramount. I do hope there has been a fire since. My memory includes the recollection that while nothing was happening between me and the movies I came down from Cape Cod to play in "Solid South" with Richard Bennett. Ah, there's a memory for you! Many of 'em.

After the first air rounds, Mr. Bennett and I became firm friends, and he has been fine to me ever since. I do remember, though, that performance when he and Elizabeth Patterson and Josain Royce Landis and myself were playing a scene together when Mr. Bennett suddenly glared at the audience and snorted: "My God, I'll have to tell this crowd a dirty story to make 'em laugh!" And then exited, leaving we three in possession of the stage if nothing much else. Another Bennett memory is of the occasion when he interrupted the show to shout, "Stage-hand! Stage-hand! Where is my cigar?" walked off to get the prop and returned to continue as though nothing untoward had occurred.

I got a Universal offer the day "Solid South" closed—and took it. My first film was "Bad Sister." It was. And a weak sister, too. After a while I begged for a part where I'd have something to do and was told: "You're not easy to cast. Miss Davis we have trouble with Slim Summerville too!" After that I was "Slim" on that list. I was supposed to have no sex appeal. But Warner Brothers did right by your Nell, and in my new film, "Ex-Lady," there are more beds than in a furniture store.

I got that Warner contract through Mr. George Arliss, who selected me, good-naturedly, over his objections, for the girl in "The Man Who Played God." It gave me a chance, and I was signed, sealed and delivered to the Warners when the picture was half completed. I don't know which of my Warner films stands out most memorably. It was a thrill to work in "The Rich Are Always With Us." We all watched George Brent and Ruth Chatterton falling more and more in love each day. I was a pretty pleased pursuing George, if you recall, and I remember the looks I got from Ruth. I think she felt he we were acting.

Another big thrill that died aborning was when she boy to whom I was engaged, er, the same one I'm married to, came West to spend the summer with us. No sooner had he arrived than the studio asked me to go East for a personal appearance jaunt. Maybe that was when I made up my mind not to miss him again in this manner. So when I got back to Hollywood and found he was waiting, we drove 310 miles through the desert under a blazing August sun to be married in Yuma. Some memory! The drive, I mean. We started with the idea that Yuma was only 100 miles away. Marion Gering told us that. Said we'd never have started had we known about the other 210 miles.

Of course, a memory that I'll never forget is that 16-day ramble from coast to coast aboard the famous Warner Brothers' "Forty-second Street Special." I wouldn't miss missed it for worlds. At two or three in the morning we'd stop at some small station where the town had been sitting up waiting for us. There were parades, interviews, camera men, radio speeches, stage appearances, banquets and what not every hour of the day. It was a tough routine, but a thrilling one. Never before was I so impressed with the mighty reaches of motion pictures. Literally millions of citizens knew us by sight, by name, and greeted us as friends though they'd never seen us except on the movies. The screen surely is the world's greatest medium for getting acquainted. I met a couple of million pals in 16 days.

State and City Leaders Laud Plan for President's Day

Praise of the Boston American's plan to observe next Sunday as "President's Day" was voiced by State Auditor Francis X. Hurley and Samuel A. Silverman, corporation counsel for the City of Boston.

Hurley and Silverman believe that President Franklin D. Roosevelt will be encouraged to do even bigger things as the nation's leader with the knowledge that the people are solidly behind him. With the knowledge that he has the confidence of the masses the President will conquer seemingly insurmountable obstacles in his task of lifting the country out of economic chaos, they believe.

PRAISE CHURCH PLAN

The giving of thanks in all churches of the land next Sunday for the leadership of President Roosevelt and the offering of prayers for a continuance of his good health is a most worthy and laudable thing in the opinion of Hurley and Silverman.

State Auditor Hurley said:

"President Roosevelt, in less than two months, has done so many worthwhile things that the people of the United States are looking forward with renewed hope. Cheerfulness and smiles have replaced gloom. His 'new deal' is already a reality. He has proved conclusively to the most severe critic that he is a man of action and that he has courage, vision and good judgment. His task is too big for him to tackle when he knows the welfare of the nation is at stake. He does not procrastinate.

TOO MUCH CRITICISM

"It is inspiring to a man of President Roosevelt's makeup to know that the people of the country have implicit confidence in him. The President's Day movement of the Boston American and other Hearst newspapers is a medium for the expression of that confidence and is therefore a splendid thing. I hope every man, woman and child in the United States will pray for our President next Sunday that he may be spared to continue the fine work so well begun."

In praising the plan, Corp. Counsel Samuel Silverman said:

"I think the 'President's Day' idea is a splendid one. I think the people of this country should be encouraged to praise the President for the fine things he has done and is trying to do in their behalf. There has been too much adverse criticism of public officials in the past. That sort of thing has a lowering down effect.

"What we need is a nation of boosters. If the President knows the people are behind him in what he is doing it will encourage him to do bigger and better things. Merited praise of the President will have a tendency to offset the propaganda of those who are trying to tear this country down.

PROVEN AS LEADER

"President Roosevelt has already proved himself a man of action, courage, and vision. He has proved himself a leader of the first rank. He has done big things in my opinion is going to do even bigger things. He has the courage of his convictions. It will make him an even greater man to have the masses behind him in the tasks he is endeavoring to accomplish.

"Every good citizen should be glad to give thanks to the Almighty on Sunday, April 30, for such a leader. Prayers for the continued mental and physical vigor of our President should occupy the attention of all classes of our population next Sunday."

Harvard to Vote in College Peace Poll

MACON HAILED BY WILEY

Akron, O., April 24 (AP)—The dirigible Macon "handles better than the Akron," Lieut. Commdr. Herbert V. Wiley, sole surviving officer of the U. S. S. Akron, said here after riding as a passenger on the Macon yesterday during the ship's second trial flight.

Wiley made his comment in answer to a question concerning the comparative merits of the two ships.

The Macon cruised for nearly 13 hours over northern Ohio and Lake Erie on the second flight, one of a series to determine whether it will be accepted from the builders by the United States Navy.

"SHARLIE" -:- By Beatrice Burton

Sharlie, Kissed by Mr. Collins on Auto Ride, Decides to Leave Her Job

"LOVELY," she heard him say again in a thick whisper. In the darkness his hand found her face, turned it up to his and he kissed her. A long, hard kiss that smelled of whiskey and bruised her lips.

Sharlie found herself remembering Caddy telling her that she was a "swell kid" and kissing her in the rumble seat of his little car. Kissing her lightly and cheerfully as if a kiss were part of an evening's fun and didn't mean anything.

Just what did this man's kiss mean? . . . A great deal, probably. He never had been the philandering sort of employee who makes love to his office help. Sharlie knew that through Edna's long experience in his office.

"He's going to ask me to marry him," she kept thinking, and for a second she had the wild feeling of regret that she had let him go so far. "He's too old for me. He's not the person I want—"

She wrenched herself away from him. "Don't! You're hurting my mouth, Mr. Collins."

Funny to be calling him "Mr. Collins" when he was making love to her like this. Funny, too, to be thinking about Caddy and other people while she was in this man's arms. If you really cared for a man, you wouldn't be thinking of anyone but him when he had his arms around you.

Kissed Her Again

"I'm sorry, Sharlie." His grip on her slackened a little. "Only I'm crazy about you."

Then the headlights of another automobile swept around the edge of the hill just above them, and he leaned forward and started his car once more.

It was almost 2 o'clock when he stopped his car at the corner of her street.

"Want to get out here, dear?" he asked when he had kissed her once more. "I'll wait until you get in your door."

Sharlie's big eyes widened in the darkness.

"Why, no. Why should I want to get out here, Mr. Collins?" There was genuine puzzlement in her voice.

Mr. Collins shrugged his shoulders. "I just thought you might not want you people to know you'd been out until this time—with me."

Sharlie shook her head slowly. "I have to explain to them just where I've been until this time. You don't mind my telling them, do you?"

"Well, I don't want Edna to know about it, Sharlie. Or at least I'd rather she didn't know about it. I don't want to be the center of office gossip, do you?" He opened the door of the car beside him and got out.

Sharlie's face grew red with anger in the darkness as she watched Mr. Collins come around to her side of the car and open the door for her to get out . . . He was letting her go without a word except this warning to keep silent about the evening they had spent together. Putting her out of his car at the street corner as if she were someone he was ashamed of! Some "lady of the evening" whom he had picked up for a few hours' pleasure—

"Well, I'd lige to know why you're doing this to me!" she said as she stepped out upon the sidewalk. "You'd take Mrs. Wilmot to her own door if you'd been out with her, wouldn't you? Is it because I work for you that I'm being dumped here in the middle of the night? If you're ashamed of me, I wish you'd told me so before we started—"

"I did tell you that I thought it was better for us not to leave the office together. I told you, just as I'm telling you now, that I didn't want to be talked about by the office force. Be sensible about this Sharlie—"

He tried to put his arms around her as she passed him. But she pushed them violently aside and ran down the street toward home.

"I hate him! I hate him!" she whispered to herself as she sped along through the shadows and through the round pools of yellow light that the street lamps threw upon the sidewalk. Her high little heels made a sharp angry sound as they clicked along.

It took Sharlie only a minute to run from the corner where Mr. Collins had dropped her to the apartment house. But in that minute she came to a firm decision.

Little Respect

She would never go back to that man's office again. Tomorrow when h epushed open the door of her little room he would find it empty. She could imagine him standing there, looking at the locked desk and the empty coat-tree that stood behind it. He would ring for her and there wouldn't be any answer. Then he'd probably pick up her telephone and ask the operator in the outer office where Miss Dunn was.

"And when he finds out I'm not there he'll call up here," Sharlie told herself as she went up the steps to the second floor of the apartment house.

She knew exactly what she was going to say to him when he did call up, too. She would tell him that she couldn't think of working in the same office with a man who had so little respect for her that he would dump her out of his car at a street corner in the middle of the night instead of taking her home as he should have done. She would say that since he evidently was ashamed of his friendship for her that she would rather never see him again. And she would tell him that he could keep the five days' salary that he owed her.

It would be terribly hard to give up the money, she went on thinking. Particularly just now when all the new fall suits and furs and coats were in the store windows . . . It would not be easy to find another position, either. Good ones were few and far between these day——

Sharlie fitted her key into the lock of the front door and stepped into the flat.

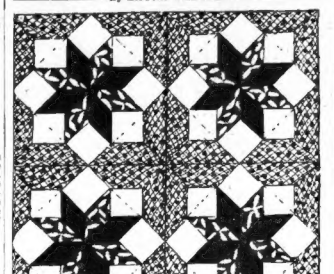
PATCHWORK QUILT

By LAURA WHEELER



Brunswick Star No. 412

STARS OF EVERY FORM and description have been incorporated in quilt designs from the oldest days of this needlecraft. With a slight variation they have come forth as a different design to merit a new name. Like most of the star designs, this Brunswick Star, lends itself to the use of a variety of materials. Easy of construction, it makes a decorative repeat on an all over patchwork quilt.

The pattern includes simple, detailed instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, yardage chart, diagram of full size quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials, and clearly outlined drawing of the patch pieces.

To obtain a pattern for this design, send 10c. to Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth ave., New York, N. Y.

DE LUXE SUPPER DISH
Of Finan Haddie

Heres a dish, thick full of tasty ingredients yet gaining more flavor from rich cheese. This starts with ¼ cup flaked Finan haddie (you can buy it canned) but a good fresh one you will get from a good fish market makes a delicious dish. Put the fish in the top of the stove in hot milk to cover for about five minutes. Then combine with 2 cups cooked rice, 2 hard cooked eggs (sliced). Next melt 4 tablespoons butter, add to it ¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. paprika, and ½ tsp. prepared mustard. Stir this into the first mixture with ¼ cup soft American cheese (chopped or ground). Last, turn this into a well greased baking dish, sprinkle it with another ¼ cup cheese, dot it with butter and put it into a fairly hot oven (375 degrees F.) just long enough to brown. Broiled tomatoes or tomato salad would be very good with this.

BAKED HAM
With Variations Worth Trying

Peel back skin of ham with a sharp pointed knife. Make incisions through ham about 1½ inches apart, filling each one with a mixture of equal parts of finely chopped watercress, cooked spinach and chopped onion, dipped in melted butter. Press in this mixture with the handle of a wooden spoon if you have one. When the whole ham is filled in this way, lay the skin back in place, wrap the ham in cheesecloth and boil gently in water, adding 2 bay leaves. Cook until tender, then take off the skin and spread with prepared mustard, and brown sugar and bread crumbs. Stick with whole cloves, then put in the oven to brown. It is quite different from the ordinary baked ham. You may be assured it is very delicious.

BROADCAST INTERRUPTION UPSET ACE "MIKE" COMMENTATOR

Edwin C. Hill Hears One of His Own Quips Tossed Back at Him in Fun

By N. F. T.

For some months past I have encountered folks generally regarding Edwin C. Hill as the ace among network word wielders. He is indeed a stirring phrase shaper. He's a painter of animated verbal pictures par excellence. This gentleman of the press appears to have moved into the place of the old school master who found himself without any pupils. Such a man becomes definitely in a class by himself. As capable and fine a fellow as Mr. Hill is, however, he has a goat for others to get. Moreover, I am advised on good authority that it happened to be separated from him one day last week.

* * * *

Mr. Hill has just returned to New York from the White House where he visited with President Roosevelt and Louis McHenry Howe, astute adviser to the Chief Executive. Mr. Howe was being lined up by Mr. Hill for next Friday night's "inside story" feature, as conducted weekly by the latter. While discussing the details, they were interrupted by a ringing telephone bell. Mr. Howe lifted the receiver and said: "This is the medieval gnome speaking," whereupon the sophisticated goat owned by Mr. Hill promptly broke away.

COMDIERED COMPLIMENT

During the last Democratic convention in Chicago, partially reported on the air in up top fashion by Mr. Hill, the "mike" man characterized Mr. Howe as "a medieval gnome" and his host had never quite forgotten it. In fact, the nickname is something that reached the rather deep rooted although concealed Howe sense of humor. Even so, Hill considered the phona remark a bit of a dig, since their talk up to that point had been along quite serious lines. Social relations were not strained for very long. Everything was made clear to the radio reporter, who learned that his "wise crack" was genuinely enjoyed by the gentleman thus dubbed. He also found that the identification has been good naturedly exploited aplenty in White House circles from the day the Roosevelts moved in.

* * * *

Moral: What one says into a microphone isn't always used against him—when real big men are concerned.

* * * *

SMOTHERED SATIRE

From rumblings heard the theater footlight comedian, Doc Rockwell, had a screamingly funny raze all ready to ride the air waves regarding George Bernard Shaw, he who makes so much jesting at our great American expense. Alas and alack, the radio network rahjahs wouldn't approve, which meant that was was that.

* * * *

Margaret Matson, conducting her "School of Clothes" by radio (WAAB) under the auspices of your favorite evening newspaper here, has a novel idea planned for tomorrow morning at 11 a. m. It sounds as though lady listeners should like it. Miss Matson will ask "The Globe Trotter" his frank opinions and preferences regarding what women wear.

WORTH WAITING UP FOR

Tonight's "Radio Forum" offering (WEEI) at 10:30 brings Atty.-Gen. Homer Cummings up to address the coast to coast air audience. Having heard him hold forth one evening last week, your Uncle N. F. T. has an inprwen hunch he should hasten to recommend him to the loudspeaker patrons hereabouts. He is Connecticut's proud contribution to the presidential cabinet group. By jingo, he's some speaker!

BOSTON AMERICAN CLASSIFIED ADS

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

THE JUNIOR LEAGUE PLAYERS gave a most excellent performance of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" on Saturday at the Peabody Playhouse . . . some of the members taking part showed marked talent . . . The story is one dear to the hearts of children and adults alike . . . particularly good to be shown in this generation, where sweetness and gentleness are not as popular as characteristics as audacity and rudeness . . .

BETTY BUTLER

Peggy Leland was a very convincing open-hearted little boy, not an easy character to portray even on the professional stage . . . we were amazed that she could act the part of a small boy so well and the children loved her portrayal.

Dearest herself could not have been more sweet and lovely than Betty Butler in the part of the mother, Mrs. Erroll . . . her Victorian costumes were charming and most becoming . . . she enacted the emotional scenes quite professionally . . .

Always a joy, Eleanor Stevenson took the part of Mr. Hobbs, the greengrocer, and three cheers should be given for Miss Stevenson for her characterization . . . her make-up was too perfect for words and she threw herself into the part of the kindly grocer with a zest that endeared her to the audience . . . she is always a pleasure in any part which she portrays . . .

Mary Loring, perhaps, more than others, had the most difficult role and we are nothing short of astonished at the manner in which she handled the part of the Earl of Dorincourt . . . it was amazing that such a young and pretty girl as Mary could change herself in appearance and voice into a cross-tempered old man . . . it was almost uncanny. She deserves a great deal of praise for her performances . . .

* * *

Ellen Bottomley Wins Praise

A NEWCOMER TO THE PLAYERS, but one who shows great promise is Ellen Bottomley . . . as Mina, the wench who tries to take the title away from Little Lord Fauntleroy, who acted the part of a cheap, designing woman to the life . . . her diction was excellent and in the costume of the period with a tiny bonnet bobbing on her head she was a character indeed . . .

We noted Mrs. John T. Bottomley and her mother, Mrs. Kenney, in the audience beaming on their daughter when Ellen appeared . . .

All of the parts in the play were characters and difficult ones, too . . . Rosamond Newton was a farmer-tenant on the Earl's estate and her impersonation was one of the rare moments in the play . . . Miss Newton is an amateur actress of ability and has played with the Foot-Lighters in Jamaica Plain . . .

There was no one more delightful in their part than Louise Reggio, as the Irish maid, Mary . . . her brogue was perfect, and in gesture and decorum she was too perfect . . .

Our Molly was very intrigued with Edith Parker as the footman in livery . . . she thought Thomas was very funny, as indeed he was . . .

Last but by no means least in the minds of the children who filled the auditorium was the excellent performance of Dougal, the Earl's dog, which was played by Jane Bancroft's dog . . . he came into the castle hall and laid down at the feet of his master as though he had always lived there . . .

The Junior League Players get more popular each season with the youngsters, who anticipate their annual offerings, and we see a great deal of improvement in their endeavors . . . this one of Frances Hodgson Burnett's was perhaps their best.

Latest Notes of the Fashionables

—By Dorothy Whipple Fry—

SAW Miss Jean Morse at an informal party the other evening in a flesh pink informal evening frock with dainty sleeves and such a modish cut. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Morse of Hyslop rd., Brookline.

At the same assembly, Miss Patricia Phelan, younger daughter of the James Phelans of Manchester and Brookline, wore a soft blue crepe with trimmings of silver at the neck and a mauve velvet sash.

Miss Peggy Cutler, sub-debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Cutler of Brookline, wore a beautiful white lace frock with a white tulle sash, very charming on her.

Miss Emily Nelson of Hammond st., Chestnut Hill, is dark, with golden brown hair. She wore a flesh colored lace frock made in dainty ruffles.

Miss Barbara Salt of Chestnut Hill wore a peach colored taffeta with saucy ruffled sleeves, chic and attractive.

Miss Nancy Newell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Newell of Boylston st., Brookline, wore soft pink organdie that was suggestive of spring.

Miss Jane Hart, daughter of Mrs. Mabel Webster Hart and granddaughter of Mrs. Edwin Webster of Chestnut Hill, also wore a pink frock that was lovely with her golden brown hair.

Another young lady who looked well in white organdie and a dainty silver ribbon in her golden brown curly hair was Miss Nancy Brodahaw.

Miss Elizabeth Albers, daughter of Dean and Mrs. Homer Albers, who is an exquisite blonde, wore a white frock with touches of pink heading and Grecian in effect. Miss Mary Elizabeth Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Clarke of Brookline, wore a frock of pastel blue, trimmed about the neck with soft pink flowers. Miss Lois Maddox looked smart with her curly hair, brushed back from her face, and curled low on her neck, wearing a smart plaid taffeta frock of tan and yellow shades.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

The Young-Old Philosopher was in one of his critical moods the other evening when he came around to see me.

"As the years increase," he began at once, "I marvel at the way I stand the strain of life in a great city. My telephone is forever jangling and jingling, there are sounds, however distant, from the noisy streets, that reach my high rooms, there are crowds in subways and trolleys, pushing and shoving one another like so many barbarians, there is riveting on ascending buildings, though I admit these are not so frequent nowadays, there are milk wagons on the cobblestones at early hours, there are loudspeakers that bawl out at unseemly seasons from the houses across the way, and—oh, I could go on forever! You know as well as I, for you, too, live here.

* * *

"But," the Young-Old Philosopher went on, "it is not so much these little tragedies that I object to as that great tragedy of the spirit which takes place inevitably if we remain too long under the spell of this siren we call Manhattan and rest our heads—if we can call it resting—upon her granite heart. I mean the lack of real contact with those we care for—the dread of casually calling upon a neighbor for fear of trespassing upon his or her sacred privacy.

"This is no one's fault. The spontaneous—I was about to say the human—thing is seldom done in New York. In the smaller towns I always feel that people come to know one another better and lead a more natural existence. Little visits over the garden hedge, ten-minute gossips on a wide veranda, back from the street, accidental meetings at the market—these delicate pleasures are part and parcel of life in a city of thirty or even fifty thousand. They are known to us who live in Manhattan—that made glad, sad, perilous city which we love. And hate.

"Why do these glittering lights attract us poor moths? There is something almost ignoble in our attitude toward the town.

"We strain at the leash once in a while, but mostly we remain quiescent and think that this is life. It is only a baryen existence, a process of hurry and madness that leads us but to the sanatorium—if not to the grave."

I saw that my friend was on the verge of a nervous breakdown; so I suggested that we play truant the whole next day and take a walk in those very lonely places of which he had spoken.

"Can't possibly do it," he said. "I'm all dated up, and I can't desert my office."

So he was just like the woman in the Dorothy Parker story who told a young girl all about the folly of thinking about her lover all the time and then went out and telephoned her own particular sweetheart, from whom she hadn't heard in a long time.

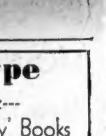
Let Nudism Come--- to Put an End to 'Nudy' Books

—By GILBERT SELDES—

For one reason only, the world may wish for the triumph of nudism—it would put an end to the writings of Thorne Smith which are based on the theory that a middle-aged man in shorts is equisitely funny, especially if placed in relation to a nymph or a statue which has come alive and is playfully amorous. This belief makes him "the American Rabelais," his publishers think and I don't think. It makes him to me a rather distasteful bore who is, at times, moderately funny. The funniest moment in his latest book, "Rain in the Doorway," comes when the hero acts as a book-clerk and a woman customer asks him whether he has "The Sex Life of the Flea," and he answers that he hasn't the sex life of a louse. The American Rabelais, to judge by sample, Mr. Smith takes sex lightly, which is a virtue, but he takes it for too long a ride and his mechanical imagination doesn't permit him to create situations or characters to carry any story very far. In one book statues come to life, in another a man and wife change sexes and the man is threatened with maternity, in one which I have not read "a commuter becomes a goldfish and writes startlingly intimate accusations with his nose on the side of his bowl" (can you wait to read it?) and in another which I have forgotten, a nymph or a goddess or something makes herself invisible at the most appropriate moments.



Gilbert Seldes

Too Wise

In his latest book, a character makes the suggestion that when an author gets to the point where his books do not sell separately, an omnibus volume is published. Authors seldom predict their own future so accurately. Mr. Smith is safe from the attacks of censors, because his manner is trivial; I do not believe he offends people sensitive about discussions of sex. But he is altogether too knowing, the light in his (professional) eye is too wilfully wicked, and he remains an adolescent's ideal of what a gay book about sex can be.

Modest Sinclair

Mr. Upton Sinclair has publicly asked why the New York Journal (as well as a number of other newspapers) hasn't reviewed his book, "Upton Sinclair Presents William Fox." As far as I am concerned, the reason is that I never received a copy. Borrowing one, I discover a possible reason for other reviewers in the charmingly modest last paragraph of Mr. Sinclair's prologue, which reads:

"At the request of William Fox, I state that he has no share in the royalties from this book. He does not wish anyone to think that he is telling his story for money. Not wishing in any behind him in altruism, I am making the book over to the Sinclair Foundation, and the royalties derived from its sales will be used for the purpose of putting a set of 12 volumes of my books into public libraries throughout the world."

Reviewers, being crabbed and corrupt individuals, could not match this gesture of renunciation. It shamed them. They could not say, "not wishing to lag behind Mr. Sinclair, we are giving all we earn from this review to a society whose object is to raise a solid gold statue of ourselves in the public square of our native town." So they kept quiet.

Scandalous

For all that, the book about William Fox is intensely interesting. I have no idea of its exact truth, since Mr. Fox is quoted on events covering many years and often specifically states that he had no memoranda, no agreements, but went into the most complicated financing deals on word of mouth agreements which were afterwards denied by the other parties. In many instances, I think he fails to make a waterproof case for himself, in others, he tells naively of purposes and practices which, while they were common enough, both in the movies and in financing, are rather shocking. He accuses almost everyone he mentions of bad faith, unscrupulous dealing, and a definite intention to ruin him.

Another example of "polite literature" buckling, breaking down, and turning to something else has to be recorded. The Bookman, for many years a combination of criticism and chit-chat among authors, has ceased to exist, its place taken by The American Review, which has an economic system as well as a moral idea to uphold. The first issue, under Seward Collins, last editor of the Bookman, is the handiest little magazine in the world, about nine by five inches, compact, well-printed, with six contributors, including the well-known Belloc and Chesterton, Christopher Dawson (whose works will presently be published here by Sheed and Ward) and Paul Elmer More, who writes an acute analysis of Proust.

The American Review will not be against literature, but will refer literature to certain standards, and no one need be surprised if the Humanist controversy of a few years ago is revived. I wish my friend Mr. Collins luck.

MODELS BY THREE NEW AMERICAN DESIGNERS APPEAR IN BOSTON; SPORTS FAVORED

Three Names You Should Know: Clarepotter, Ruth Payne and Alice Smith

By Margaret Matson

LIKE PROPHETS in their own country, American designers have long been denied the prominence that they deserve. It took the surge of nationalistic feeling that we have experienced recently to bring them to the fore. Their creations have made fashion history, and yet, because they were Americans, and therefore regarded as carrying no prestige WITH Americans, their names have remained hidden. After all, it is not unreasonable to imagine that we have as much talent here as abroad. And Americans understand the clothes problems of Americans. Designs that have come from these people have been decidedly wearable, faultlessly practical, and not without that spark of individuality and genius that one demands of new fashions.

Recently three new names have appeared.. They are Clarepotter, as she calls herself; Miss Ruth Payne, and Miss Alice Smith. All three of them are young women of unusual brilliance who have been designing clothes behind the scenes, so to speak, for several years. All three of them, too, are well-known to the inner circle of stylists, fashion editors, and smart social registerites that form the ruling class in our fashion world.

It was with the keenest of pleasure that we discovered some of their models in Boston the other day. Clarepotter especially attracts us. "I like to think of dress-designing as painting," she is reputed to have said. She likes to make simple, wearable sports clothes of tie silks like the photograph on the left, and her plaid handkerchief linen with the heavier black linen jacket and gloves is most inviting.

Alice Smith makes delightful daytime dresses—the sort one can slip into and wear to a thousand different occasions. Ruth Payne has a spectator sports frock that stands ace high in our estimation. The frock is of a sturdy novelty linen, non-crushable and with a bit of a shine—in black! The jacket is boxy and brief—in white. And there is a scarf one twists twice at the throat—of a cerise-y red. We like to picture it in our minds with a white linen hat and black linen gloves and bag—or possibly a bag to match the scarf. At any rate that is the sort of thing that Miss Payne may be expected to do.

Speaking of American designers brings many names to mind. We're thinking of the John-Frederic's hats that we adore. Elizabeth Hawes' hats, too. The Hattie Carnegie and Sally Milgrim clothes we've longed to possess. And the Kivietts dinner and evening gowns we mentioned not long ago. Charles Armour is another name that's highly respected. We can think of a number of others, also, but the above are those whose clothes are in Boston.

If you should want further information about the American-designed clothes mentioned, please write Margaret Matson. Incidentally, the Clarepotter models pictured are very inexpensive.

DOTTED TIE SILK AND HANDKERCHIEF LINEN

Dotted tie silk, one of the newest of the new sports fabrics used in a very wearable little frock and matching hat. Designed by Clarepotter.

Handkerchief linen, printed, makes a most unusual frock and has as its jacket and gloves black linen. The colors of the plaid are cerise, gray, black, and white. Designed by Clarepotter.

"Clarepotter," as she signs herself, has been influencing the current fashions for a number of years. It took a depression to give her name the prominence it deserves.

Rhubarb Sauce as Cooked by Hotel Chef

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Broadcast Over Station WAAB

HAD YOUR QUOTA of spring tonic today? We don't mean sulphur and molasses, but lovely pink, tender rhubarb.

Not necessarily, either, in "sass," although it is possible to make rhubarb sauce that's truly appetizing with zary a string.

Here are the directions given us some time ago by one of the chefs of the Hotel Statler—

Rhubarb Sauce

Cut hothouse rhubarb (unpeeled) into 2-inch sticks. Lay in rows in an enameled baking pan, sprinkle with granulated sugar to taste and fill the pan ¾ full of cold water. Lay buttered sheets of paper on top of the rhubarb and bake in a moderately hot oven, 375, for 20 minutes or until the rhubarb is tender. Take the paper off and the rhubarb will be found deliciously pink and firm, yet thoroughly cooked.

And here are two other rhubarb specials that should make Dad groan less loudly over the Easter clothes bills that are about to come in.

Rhubarb Meringue Pie

1 pt. stewed rhubarb, sifted.
1 cup sugar.
Grated rind of 1 orange.
1 tbsp. butter.
1 tbsp. cornstarch.
3 eggs.
Pie crust.

Heat the rhubarb, add the sugar, the orange rind, the butter, and cornstarch blended with a tablespoonful of cold water. Stir over hot water until it thickens, then pour into the beaten egg yolks. Place in a deep plate lined with crust, cover with a top crust, or leave uncovered, and bake as directed for custard pies. If a meringue is to be used, keep this on the top and bake the extra 10 minutes in a slow oven.

RHUBARD COBBLER

2 cups rhubard, diced
1 egg
2-3 cup sugar
Baking powder biscuit crust

Beat egg lightly, add sugar and rhubard and dot with butter; pour this mixture into buttered baking dish, cover with baking powder biscuit dough, and bake in a hot oven until brown. Serve with Hard Sauce:

¼ cup butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1-8 tsp. lemon extract
2-3 tsp. vanilla
3 tbsps. cream

Cream the butter, add sugar gradually, and flavoring, and cream.

Jealousy Foolish, Miss Fairfax Declares

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Last summer I met a boy for whom I care a great deal. In fact, it was a case of love at first sight for both of us. He told me how much he loved me, and he has been very attentive. Recently I wanted to make him jealous, and I had several dates with other boys. He became very angry, and I promised him I wouldn't go out with them any more. Now he is starting to go out with other girls. Do you think he is doing it to make me jealous? Should I show that I am jealous, or should I act as if I don't care?

BROWN EYES.

Dear Brown Eyes: If you ask me, I think this trying to make the "other one" jealous is just so much old-fashioned comic opera stuff. Modern young people have gone past that stage today. Why not be frank about it—say you were just playing a game in going out with these boys; that you have "reformed," now, and you hope he has?

Etiquette

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Is it correct for a gentleman to leave by the left rear door of the car and walk around the car to open the other door for a lady, the left door opening to the passing traffic of the street, which makes this seem awkward?

2—When a door opens toward the inside, should the gentleman enter first and hold the door for the lady, or should he follow?

N.

1—It is better, if it is convenient (that is, if the car isn't crowded), for the man to get out of the car by the door nearest the sidewalk, for it is often very dangerous to get out of the car on the side of the passing traffic.

2—If the man can conveniently hold the door open without entering first, this is what should be done. However, if the door is an especially heavy one, it is sensible for him to excuse himself for entering first, and then hold the door open for the woman.

Pellagra Is Great Puzzler to Science

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

PELLAGRA IS one disorder that has baffled science for a long time. Though great advances have been made in its control, the exact cause responsible for its symptoms is not known. But during the past decade the disease has come to be regarded as a nutritional disease and not as an infection. By this I mean that it is probable pellagra is caused by faulty diet and not by a germ.

Dr. Copeland

The disease has been known for more than two hundred years. At one time it was believed to be a poor man's disease, caused by the lack of food, sunshine and proper sanitation. But it is encountered in families where there is no lack of food, but where the wrong kind of food is eaten. Occasionally it is met in persons who have indulged in severe and dangerous methods of dieting.

We are greatly indebted in many ways to the excellent work conducted by the United States public health service. It conducted intensive investigations of pellagra. Its study reveals that pellagra can be traced to a diet lacking in certain vitamins, particularly vitamin G. It is believed that contained in this particular vitamin is a substance necessary to prevent this disease.

Fortunately, this vitamin is found in a variety of foods. For example, a diet that is varied and contains an abundant supply of fresh lean meats, liver, milk, canned salmon, eggs, dried beans, peas and spinach, assures an adequate supply of this vitamin.

Diet, as you see, is important in the prevention of pellagra. Pellagra is not common in localities where the inhabitants live on a diet which varies very little from day to day.

Chic Ringlets at Sides and Back of the Head

By HELEN FOLLETT

RINGLETS at the sides and back of the hairdress are chic and charming, but they are a bother to the busy woman, scrambling to keep bowling wolves from the door. She can resort to the marceled coiffeur, waved to the very edge at the back with a single upturn of tress ends. The coiffure with the smooth crown is modish; there are those among us who look older when top hair is waved.

FINGER NAILS break easily when the hands come in daily contact with harsh soaps and flaying cleaning powders. Clipping increases brittleness, so keep faithfully to the company of the nail file. At night, apply cuticle cream. Or dip finger tips in hot mineral oil, cover each one with an absorbent cotton thimble. Diet deficiency may be responsible. Drink milk, eat lettuce.

Daily True Story — The Victor

IF GLARES could kill, both Joe and Frank would have dropped dead on the spot, even though they had been the best of friends since childhood. That friendship dated back to the days when both wore the tiny kilt skirts.

Today they stood there, not three feet apart. Their hair fairly bristled as their eyes shot steely shafts at each other. Neither had expected to see the other and their surprise was nearly as great as their indignation.

And there stood Dorothy, too surprised to realize that she was the innocent cause of it all. A few weeks before Joe had introduced Frank to Dorothy just when she was trying to stifle a heartache after sending another sweetheart away to forget her. But that chance introduction was the death blow to his expectations.

Dorothy stood there in the living room of her father's great country home, looking first at one and then the other. Her eyes showed her bewilderment. Suddenly Joe shot out venomously:

"Did Sis tell you I was here?"

"Do you think I am following you?" Frank shot back with equal venom.

A BITTER FEUD.

Those two sentences sealed the fate of all three. From that instant a bitter feud existed between the two old pals. Dorothy became the prize each was determined to capture.

Day after day she was stormed by both. Wherever she went Joe and Frank were at her side. All through that season and the next, at dances, theater parties or any other social function which Dorothy attended, both men contrived to be there. Neither cared a hang for society, but Dorothy was in the center of things, so to keep one from gaining an advantage both suppressed their dislike for gayety.

"Oh, it's such fun," Dorothy confided to her sister one day. "But I want them to be pals again. I know they fairly hate each other now, but don't want me to know it. I'm afraid whatever I might do will make matters worse."

Time after time she tried to bring them together again. While they always were smiling in her presence, she couldn't help seeing the flash of eyes as the two met. Besides all this, she was sincerely fond of both. She knew the time would come when both would propose to her, and that was what she dreaded most. Often she pondered over what to do when the "zero hour" came.

"Which of them shall I take?" she would ask herself. "Maybe it would be better to reject them both," she would muse.

Two years of bitterness and hatred rolled around—two years of continuous war. Frank had one entanglement which Joe could not attain. While Frank was an expert horseman and Dorothy could ride like the wind, Joe could not keep in the saddle at anything better than a walk. Frank saw in this a big advantage and took on a new hope.

PLEADS FOR TIME

It was on an occasion like this that he pleaded his love. They were cantering along a bridle path near Dorothy's home in early spring, just when the countryside was losing its bleak, winter appearance. Frank reined his horse close beside Dorothy. His arm reached out and encircled her shoulders. Instinctively she knew one of those dread moments had arrived and drew away.

Frank followed, and all the way to the house he pleaded, but her only answer was, "Wait; give me time."

That same night Joe cornered her at a dance all three were attending, and for the second time that day Dot answered, "Wait; give me time."

Two days later both men got a shock. Each received an identical note which read:

"I am leaving at once for New York and sailing for Europe tonight. I'll give you my answer when I get back."

For the next two months Dorothy was flooded with letters and cablegrams. Each man pleaded for an answer. Then one day two cablegrams came back from the other side. They, too, were identic, one addressed to Frank and the other to Joe. They merely said: "Sailing for home next week. Dot."

As she came down the gangplank from the ship she saw Frank and Joe there on the dock. Both rushed toward her and then suddenly stopped, for she was beaming gaily and her hand rested on the arm of another man—a man both knew, for they had all gone to school together. He had been abroad for more than two years, in fact ever since she had rejected him, and both had forgotten him. Suddenly they looked at each other and then back at Dorothy, who by that time had sauntered up to them.

"Let me introduce my husband," she said simply.

Joe looked at Frank and Frank at Joe. For an instant neither could speak. Then they smiled at each other and at at the same time each reached out to congratulate the happy pair. The four strolled from the dock together. That old friendship had been the victor and they were pals again.

Household Hints

THE FRESHNESS of fish is determined by firm flesh, bright gills, moist-looking open eyes and shiny scales. Be suspicious of any odor except the natural smell of fresh fish. When cooking fish, wash well in cold water, pat dry with a soft cloth or crumpled paper and cook.

A GOOD WAY to prevent children from using one another's handkerchiefs and to avoid confusion in sorting them is to provide each child with handkerchiefs with borders or designs of a distinctive color—pink, blue, green or yellow.

DISH TOWELS should be soaked in boiling water into which a dash of soda has been sprinkled.

JEWRY PRAISED FOR DONATIONS TO CHARITIES

The four-year record of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies was reviewed and praised by Louis E. Kirstein, president of the organization, at its annual meeting at Temple Ohabei Shalom.

He pointed out that the number of those contributing to the Associated Philanthropies, which supports 16 institutions and agencies, had increased from 3500 to 10,000 in that period despite the impairment of wealth and earning ability of men and women.

During the four-year period, he said, a total of $2,127,000 was collected out of the $2,309,000 pledged for the work. This achievement was consummated, he declared, despite the fact that the country has been passing through four of the most turbulent and chaotic years of its history. The record, he added, would have been excellent in normal years.

He commended the work of the business men's council and the women's division of the Associated Philanthropies and expressed appreciation of the appropriations made by the Boston Emergency Relief Campaign and its allocating committee.

He also gave high praise to the professional men and women, the doctors and nurses in hospitals and clinics, social workers in family welfare and child care and to character building and educational agencies for their unselfish devotion to the work.

Dr. B. M. Selekman, executive director of the Associated Philanthropies, said the solution of present difficulties lay in a program of economic and social planning. Dr. George Bigelow, state health commissioner, spoke on the importance of protective health measures in times of depression.

Trio Held Up Chief, Land in Cell

Auburn, N. H., April 24—The mistake of mistaking Police Chief Harvey Stowe as a "petter" at Lake Massabesic brought three Manchester youths into court today on charges of armed holdup.

The trio, Robert Mickelson, Walter Stewart and George Pearson, were handcuffed with the aid of a woman friend of Chief Stowe's, who consented to pose as his sweetheart to trap holdup suspects.

Chief Stowe was not parked long when an auto drove up and two youths alighted. One held a flashlight and the other a revolver, the police head reported. He surprised the pair when he levelled his own revolver at them and quietly handcuffed the pair before he walked to the other auto and captured the third youth.

MILL WORKER TO FACE COURT

North Andover, April 24—Whether he went to Philadelphia with a woman to seek work or deserted his family as the fourth child was near birth must be determined in District Court today when William C. Harmon, 36, is arraigned for desertion.

Harmon was arrested in the same lodging house at which Beatrice Blockstock, 20, was registered. Harmon and Miss Blockstock formerly worked together in a mill here.

Harmon spent the night in a cell, although friends offered to furnish bail.

Mrs. Harmon remained at her home in Osgood with Frederick, 6; Richard, 3; Robert, 2, and a two weeks old infant. She said the friendship of her husband for Miss Blockstock has caused many family alterations recently.

Harmon and Miss Blockstock both said they went to Philadelphia in search of work. They were found to have been registered separately.

Four Families Flee Back Bay Fire

Investigation was being made today to determine the cause of the $1000 blaze which broke out between the walls in the fourth floor of an apartment dwelling in Belvidere st., Back Bay. Smoke filled the building, forcing four families to flee.

Firemen succeeded in confining the blaze to the apartment of Miss Louisa Hildreth, although they were considerably hampered by the thick smoke.

WHITE HOUSE IN N. H. IS SEEN

Little Boars Head, N. H., April 24—Prospect of a visit from President Roosevelt this summer was the principal topic of gossip here today.

The prospects were seen in negotiations of James Roosevelt, son of the President, for hire of a 15-room mansion, once owned by former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts and adjoining the present Fuller summer estate. The house is now owned by Mrs. John W. Staley of Detroit.

Such a visit of the President would be in connection with a cruise that he plans along the New England coast and to Eastport, Me., where he has a summer place of his own.

While final negotiations have not been completed, it was learned today that the President's son has progressed enough to insure a Roosevelt lease.

The section is not new to the President, he having stopped here before on a visit to the summer home of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Cushing, parents of the President's daughter-in-law.

On the Job every minute
—they've just got to be right

End-on, this tray-full of fresh-made Chesterfields looks like a huge honeycomb. Inspectors, expert from long practice, remove with tweezers each torn or imperfect cigarette.

Each and every Chesterfield!

Each tray of CHESTERFIELDS from the cigarette-making machines passes under the watchful eyes of inspectors, trained by long practice to see flaws such as an end of torn paper, or a poorly filled cigarette.

And there's still another safeguard . . . two "electric detectives" on each packaging machine. Electric fingers "feel" each end of every cigarette, and throw out every imperfect package.

Open your pack of Chesterfields, and look at them. It's no accident that every cigarette is round, firm and full. Somebody's been on the job every minute to give you what you want . . . a cigarette that's made right in every way and that's milder and tastes better.

1000 AT SHOW AS BANDITS STEAL $790

Girl Cashier Locked in Closet in Dorchester Theater Holdup

The second theater robbery in a few weeks stirred police of Roxbury and Dorchester today and brought the loss of a $790 payroll to the Franklin Park Theater, Blue Hill ave. and Columbia rd., Dorchester.

It was accomplished by the same pair of smooth talking bandits who recently escaped with the payroll of the Shawmut Theater, a mile further intown on Blue Hill ave.

LOCKED IN CLOSET

Miss Ruth Michaelson, of Hosmer st., Dorchester, the cashier, and Benjamin Bebchick, the treasurer, were forced into a closet by the pair at Franklin Park, and Harry Goldstein, manager, was locked into the theater office when he interrupted the bandits at work.

An audience of more than 1000 sat through the feature picture during the robbery, many of them unaware of the robbery until they finally reached the sidewalk. The two robbers left balcony seats shortly after the feature picture had been started. They showed a knowledge of the theater's system in choosing the time when Miss Michaelson and Bebchick would be engaged in making up the payroll.

"Stay away from the desk," one of the bandits warned as he stepped into the office and surprised the cashier and treasurer. Both intruders exhibited revolvers.

SCOOP UP CASH

While one man scooped the money the other backed Miss Michaelson and Bebchick into the closet. Goldstein entered a few minutes later and was locked in the room, while the bandits left the theater singly.

Neither man attempted to shield his face, except that one turned up the collar of a brown overcoat.

BAY STATE HERRING RUNS SEEN BY THOUSANDS

The herring runs are on. Sunday found thousands visiting the scene of the annual swim of the herring back to fresh water for spawning. Men, women and children with nets did their best to gather in a good catch of the fish with nets of many types—In many places one could see efforts to catch the fish by hand. Down at East Weymouth Doris Starkey was making good as a scooper of herring. You see her here with one of her many catches of the day.

FARES REFUSED TO BRING FIGHT BEFORE COURT

Parents Claim Town Broke Pact to Transport Children

Test suit actions will be taken by parents of pupils in Milton schools today in their fight against the school committee's recent action [illegible] to pay for [illegible] children.

ALL TO REFUSE FARE

The first and most important step will be to have the children [illegible] into [illegible] each take them to school as I refuse to pay their fare. This will be done under instruction of the parents' who hope to thus force the committee to take the matter into court to collect the fares.

The second action will be the presentation of a petition to Parkman Simonds, state commissioner of education, contending that the school committee is legally required to transport pupils of the town. The petition last night contained signatures of 160 parents and more are expected before it is presented today.

Another petition bearing the signatures of 63 residents of the Scott Woods section, has been presented to the school committee and will be considered by that body at its meeting tonight.

About 300 children are affected by the ruling of the committee, a ban April 13 to furnish them school bus rides to Milton schools. The committee explained the action would save $1000 for the balance of the fiscal year and would permit the otherwise necessary dismissal of four teachers.

Under the plan the pupils, instead of riding free would pay 40 cents each weekly for the rides. The school department formerly paid the amount directly to the bus company.

ISSUE UP TO COURTS

Parents, however, contend the new ruling is in violation of the statutes. They also declared there was a standing agreement to furnish transportation to pupils.

They believe their action in plan to have their children go to school with a refusal to pay their fares will force the issue in the courts in two ways. If either the bus company or the school committee, which has a contract with the transportation company, tries to collect for the fares, it will have to be in legal suits. The children are prevented from riding on the buses without paying their fare by the parents plan to keep them out of school until truest officers take the cases into court.

ILLNESS FATAL TO MORIARTY

Funeral services for James Moriarty, for more than 25 years an employe of the Hearst newspapers in Boston, will take place tomorrow morning from his home at 2A Parkway Crescent, Milton, with a solemn high mass of requiem in St. Angela's Church at 8 o'clock.

Moriarty died yesterday after an illness of more than six weeks. He was 49. When the Boston Evening American was founded more than a quarter of a century ago he become employed in the composing room, in later years becoming foreman of the composing room of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

For years Mr. Moriarty was a fishing fan aboard the King Philip. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Moriarty, a daughter, Clare, a brother, John and a sister, Agnes.

VOTE TO SETTLE TERM IN OFFICE

Malden candidates for municipal office at the next election will not know until the votes are counted whether they are elected for one or for two years, for on the same ballot which carries their names will also be the question as to whether or not the city shall hold biennial elections. If the city votes in favor of biennials then the candidates elected the same day will serve for two years.

This situation arises because Malden plans to hold biennials, if approved by the voters, on the odd years, so as not to conflict with the state elections held on the even years. The Legislature has approved the change, subject to approval by the voters at a referendum.

Debt Paid; 11 Year Silence Ends

A silence vow he made in Boston 11 years ago was broken at Wilmington, Del., today by Melvin Train, one time engaged in a Boston business with his brother-in-law.

Train broke the silence only after he had mailed the final payment to a Boston investor who had passed money in the company of himself and his brother-in-law.

The brother-in-law, according to the story, absconded with the money and later committed suicide in New York after the funds had been dissipated. Train then vowed he would speak to no one until every cent was paid back.

Brrr! Boston Harbor's No Place for Spring Swimming

Chester E. Marlow is a first class water tender as far as coast guard records go, but never has he met up with water quite as cold for swimming as in Boston harbor.

Marlow, whose home is at Wallingford, Ct., is attached to the destroyer Cassin, whose berth at the navy yard looks but a short distance from North End Park.

Jibes of his mates over his swimming prowess prompted him to swan dive into the harbor in spite of a warning from other mates that the water temperature was down to 50 degrees.

All went well until he neared the North End side of the harbor. Then his muscles tightened up; his teeth chattered—and he wished he was back aboard the Cassin.

Patrolman John Smith, of the harbor police, sighted the guards man quite a bit off shore. He picked him up in a police boat, but found that he had a speechless young man on his hands. Between chattering teeth, Marlow tried to explain, but soon gave it up as a bad job.

From across the harbor, Patrolman Smith noticed the semaphore signals of another guardsman and made out from that the story of the dare and the near disastrous ending. Marlow was thawed out aboard the Cassin, much wiser than when he first leaped into the harbor.

Former Patrolman Edward J. McMahon, of Peabody, alleged corespondent in "affairs" with Mrs. Jessie B. Costello accused husband slayer, has refuted many of the statements credited to him according to Atty. Francis E. Rafter counsel for Mrs. Costello.

Atty. Rafter also stated that no plans to enter complaint with officials of the telephone company to the effect that his telephone at both office and home have been tapped of late.

"2-GUN" BAKER LOSES SUIT

In the hard luck diary of James H. "Two-Gun" Baker, one time motorcycle guardian of Quincy highways, a fire in his home and the loss of a new dress uniform was chalked up today.

Bakers mystery transfer from motorcycle to police [illegible] duty, [illegible] former Mayor Thomas I. McGrath, [illegible] periodic sickness of his children, "epidemic" when all were ill, and various other happenings have been crowded into the past year.

He proved himself adept at fire as well as police work by extinguishing the blaze before the arrival of firemen that he had first called by telephone. The blaze was confined to a closet.

TRIO CAPTURED IN STORE

Three North End youths, discovered and taken into custody by police answering a burglar alarm at a drugstore in Union at early last night, will be brought into court today, police declared.

Michael DeMora, 18, of Tileston st., North End, was captured in the rear of the store. Police say he was equipped with gloves and a flashlight and that an unloaded revolver was on the floor a few feet from him. Police officials said he had a record of arrests for burglary.

Police also discovered Joseph Cunto, 16, of Tileston st., and Frank Bruno 17, of Chester st., both of the North End, astride a 12-foot wall in the rear of the building. Police claim DeMora had climbed to the wall with them and had gained entry into the building by breaking a second story window.

In Salem there was a colorful parade yesterday afternoon. This was followed last night by a reception at the Phillips School, which officially closed the three-day program. A referendum on the two questions was held with less than a third of the voters registering their choice. It is the first time beer has been openly sold under license in this town in more than half a century.

The pair gave their names to police of the City Point station as Anthony Adamowicz, 17, of Clarkson st., Dorchester, and Joseph Laskowski, 13, of Boston st., South Boston. They were captured after the cruising car, which was chasing the stolen auto, crashed into the fleeing machine.

Typos Withdraw Wage Slash Offer

Because of the inflation program that has yet to be announced by President Roosevelt, members of Boston Typographical Union voted for postponement on the proposition for a new wage scale and withdrew their offer to absorb a wage reduction of 10 cents an hour. Members believe the inflation program will tend to increase the cost of living and lower the purchasing power of the dollar.

PEACE HINGES ON FREEDOM

A declaration that there could be no national or international peace until Ireland has a complete and independent republic was made by Senator Joseph Connolly, minister of lands and fisheries in the Irish Free State, at a meeting in Faneuil Hall.

The gathering held under the auspices of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, heard the senator declare that he is here to arrange for the redemption of the Republican bonds for which Americans subscribed $5,000,000 in 1919 and 1920.

He asserted that when court proceedings were completed, the Irish government intended to redeem the bonds on the basis of $1.25 on the dollar, 25 cents of which has already been paid.

'Hi-De-Ho' at Wilbur and Abbey Players at Hollis Will Stay Over for Third Week

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The week just closed has convinced George Holland that his all-Negro revue, "Hi-De-Ho," now at the Wilbur, not only has a place in the sun but is ripe for a cross country jaunt. In other words, this gay and festive musical concoction will not move immediately out of Boston for a Broadway showing. That was the original plan, but it has been abandoned for the benefits, if there are to be any, of wider travel. New York must wait. Instead of terminating the local engagement next Saturday night, the highly tanned entertainment will remain at the Wilbur for a third week, and will then start West.

* * *

In this manoeuver Philadelphia and Cleveland will be given an opportunity to test its qualities following which Chicago will be invaded. "Hi-De-Ho" appears to have captured popular favor, a good deal of which may be safely attributed to the singing of Jules Bledsoe. This deep-chested, brown athlete from Texas has been making audiences at Jb and take notice since the first performance of Mr. Gershwin's "Show Boat." Mr. Bledsoe in many respects is the best remembered songster of that organization.

With the news that "Hi-De-Ho" is to remain at the Wilbur for a third week, comes the sudden announcement that the Abbey Theater Players also will add a third week to their engagement at the Hollis. Current prosperity has had something to do with this decision, but a governing factor was also the ease with which the company could sail directly from Boston to Ireland on May 7. New repertoire organizations visiting Boston have so seldom caught the ear and eye of the devout playgoer. The Stratford-upon-Avon company in Shakespearean repertoire approached it, but did not quite reach the heights. For the third week, starting May 1, one new play will be presented, "The Words Upon The Window Pane," a one-act composition by W. B. Yeats. It will share the night's bill with "The Whitehead-ed Boy."

Musical Gem Revived at Symphony Hall

By MOSES SMITH

The musical stream has passed many a bridge since the first performance, in 1900, of Sir Edward Elgar's "Dream of Gerontius," which was performed last night at Symphony Hall by the Handel and Haydn Society, under the auspices of the League of Catholic Women.

Inevitably the score has dated worn thin here and there, and repeatedly reveals the Wagnerian influence. But there is much to admire still—the sensitive and masterful orchestral scoring, the broad development of the leading motives, and the patent inspiration of the composer, who writes with moving sincerity on the religious text of Cardinal Newman.

It is a pity, indeed, that this masterful work has been neglected. In the same degree Mr. Thompson Stone, who led the excellent performance last night, is to be congratulated for reviving it. Under his leadership the Handel and Haydn chorus sang musically and with the right degree of fervor, while the People's Symphony Orchestra, which had the burden of Elgar's rich and powerful score, played far better than it has in many a month.

The soloists, far above the usual routine of oratorio, contributed heavily to the performance. For they included Paul Althouse tenor, for whom the tremendous and arduous role is as if made to order, and who sang yesterday with beauty of tone and inspired musicality; Margaret Matzenauer, contralto, a musician-singer without a peer in our time, and Harry Newcombe, bass, who fared on the whole very well in such distinguished company

The Bowdoin features the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Rasputin and the Empress."

The cast has three favorites, John, Ethel and Lionel Barrymore. "Parole Girl" is the associate picture, with Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke, Marie Prevost and Hale Hamilton. The vaudeville presents the Melody Fiends, a dancing and musical feast.

HOLLYWOOD NEWS

Gary Cooper to Star in "One Sunday Afternoon" and Also in "Caravan"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, April 24—A little discussion that has been rocking Hollywood is going to be settled once and for all three weeks from next Sunday. Lilian Harvey is going to prove that her Mercedes car is better than Gary Cooper's Deusenberg, or vice versa. At any rate, the race is to be held at Muroc Lake in the Mojave desert, with official starters, cameramen and a motion picture audience.

Gary's got to get the race out of his system because he begins work on "One Sunday Afternoon" very shortly. Then there is "Caravan," opposite Claudette Colbert, slated for him. "Caravan" is by Paul Hervey Fox and was originally called "Safari." It's a Cooper picture with a suitable Claudette Colbert role.

They are Louella O. Parsons going to make a lady of Ginger Rogers. The red-haired, peppy musical comedy gal has been signed by Radio for three pictures, all of them heavy dramatic numbers. Her work in "Careless" won her the contract. The new job begins June 1 in a movie to be directed by William Seiter. Surprising that Ginger, whose forte has always been that of a comedienne, should suddenly be made a dramatic actress. Universal has put in a bid for Ginger to play the lead opposite Lew Ayres in "In the Big Money." Things are looking up for her these days, but she won't be able to go to Universal unless they will promise to deliver her to Radio by June 1.

A Line or Two:

There is an addition to the Los Angeles Examiner's motion picture staff. A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hoffman, early this morning. The baby weighs seven and a half pounds and, according to Jerry, the first thing she asked for was a typewriter. She will be called Karen, which sounds appropriate for a motion picture baby. Perhaps she'll become a movie actress.

One of those Tod Browning thrillers with plenty of mystery, chills and thrills, will be filmed in New Orleans and the surrounding country. Ted and Mrs. Tod, accompanied by Harry Sharrock, production manager, have already left for New Orleans. They will be followed in a week by a camera crew. Walter Huston plays the leads and so far the child is unnamed. The shrimp camps, the bayous and all of the features which have made Louisiana so picturesque are being filmed. Sounds interesting

Burlesque

To the Old Howard today comes a talented dancing girl in the person of Georgia Sothern, known as "A Breeze from the South." Miss Sothern has long been a favorite in the realm of burlesque. The burlesque show at the "Big Sensation" company, with "Riding" Billy Watson, Eddie Dale, Johnny O'Connor and other comedians of the continuous bill are Gates, Clair and Haynes in "Steps on Steps," Russo, European juggler, and Hamilton and Bennett in "Watch the Bricks."

Wheeler and Woolsey Put Over Laughs Aplenty While Talent Abounds on the Stage

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Africa in Black and White could well be a title for the entire RKO B. F. Keith program this week. For the Dark Continent is the feature picture's locale, and Negro talent is the bigger and better portion of the stage show. This latter is of the gala kind, for the house has streamers to tell the world this is RKO vaudeville week in all its New England theaters. Nine acts are set forth, five of them knitted into a snappy revue of the Harlem type.

* * *

"So This Is Africa," is the film It is a Wheeler & Woolsey vehicle; the WW brand is now an established mark for the fans, the movies so labelled run pretty well to schedule, the comics contribute their usual selves, and for their admirers everything is rosy. Currently the two comedians are seen in a burlesque that has a couple of satiric shafts. One is darted at the jungle type, and the other is an advance laugh on coming photoplays built around warrior women.

Being all for fun's sake, "So This Is Africa" has little reason, and not much rhyme, save what appears in its songs. A horde of Hollywood Amazons, led by Raquel Torres, traipse through synthetic jungle land and probably go strong for their newest film.

The vaudeville opens strong. The Four Casting Pearls are agile gentlemen, given to doing things on and from the cross bars. They stir up enthusiasm. Hunter and Percival have song and patter and hokum; then appears Nelson Pierson, composer of songs, acting as master of ceremonies and pianist for presenting three girls in pleasing specialties. Valentine Vox and Walters are a couple of pretty-trilloquists; they and their dummies kick up the laughs, and go off to a good hand.

The next is the contribution of the white folk. What follows is superior; Negroes are born entertainers, anyways. Ralph Cooper and orchestra are now on stage; Ralph is a sort of St. Vitus leader, for all we know, unique; his band is the kind that for so long were the aces in public favor.

Three lads tap away expertly; then Adelaide Hall scores with her songs, being encored; Seville dances in the hotcha fashion, and follows the smash hit of the day. This is Fre-dee Bates, Hera's headliner; Bates is now here for the fourth time within the year, and that is a sure sign of merit.

GERMANS LEAD IN THRILLING 6-DAY BIKE RACE

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

MR. BOSTON

Six-Day Bike Racing Perhaps It Is Sport Race Terrific Strain

Amateur Boxers Shine Give Best Efforts Home Run Hitting

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

The six-day bike race has started at the Garden, and those ns who like to remain awake all night are particularly happy. ⁴ -ways classified six-day bike racing with such amusements as Marathon running and pole sitting. The only difference is that six-day bike racing pays much better dividends to the contestants and to the promoters.

I intentionally omitted including Marathon dancing along with the other playful pastimes. Marathon dancing is not an amusement. It is a form of torture. I have often wondered some judge has not sentenced some of the gin addicts of this jazz age to dance 100 miles or so without sleep instead of compelling the taxpayers to lodge them in flossy jails.

The six-day bike riders will go merrily on their way until Saturday night. They will keep circling around the big saucer at the Garden like moths flying around a light. The moths usually end up by getting their wings scorched. Six-day bike riders suffer broken legs and arms, and sometimes a broken neck, as they race dizzily around the track.

I presume all readers of this column have not attended a six-day race. I can, therefore, be excused for explaining that each team is composed of two riders. One man must be on the track at all times. During the exciting moments of the race, when some team is trying to steal a lap on the field, the riders keep relieving each other.

Six-day riders must snatch their food and sleep where they can find it. They will live in the Garden all week, sleeping in the dressing rooms. They must necessarily limit their sleep to short periods as there is always the necessity of relieving their partner, and also of being prepared to try to stop an attempt to lap the field.

Six-day riders know of more things to take to keep them from falling asleep than any group of athletes. They also have numerous kinds of stimulants which help them furnish the final drive so necessary for a winning combination.

I fear the 3.2 beer has not sufficient kick in it to fire six-day riders with new life. The riders will probably drink beer to replenish the liquids in their dried out systems. Riding a bike for six days and six nights is one way to reduce weight if you care to make this kind of an effort.

Six-day bike races furnish work for a great many people, especially carpenters, who must prepare and care for the track. It also gives those persons who like to stay out all night a place to go. Perhaps this is sufficient justification for six-day races.

Amateur Boxers Also Get Under Way on Long Grind

The national amateur boxing championships will hold the center of the stage at the Arena tonight, tomorrow night and on Wednesday evening. It is regretted that the six-day bike race was dropped into Boston the same week the national championships are being staged. I have found that the title bouts are a sufficient strain on the public without the added effort of attending a six-day bike race. I am told the conflict was unavoidable.

You will forget all about some of the dismal professional bouts you have witnessed if you take in the amateur title show. The simon pures always give everything they possess in the fighting line. What they lack in finesse they more than make up for by willingness and unflinching courage. The nationals will present a class show. Only champions and near champions will compete.

Al Mello, Sammy Fuller, Frankie Genaro, Jackie Fields, Bat Battalino and numerous other famous professional stars got their start in amateur rings. Perhaps this year's tournament will also produce some future champions for the professional game.

American League Has Best Home Run Hitters

The American League has a decided edge on the National League in the matter of home run hitting this year. Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx & Co. have collected 27 circuit clouts against nine for National Leaguers. The National League ball is made by the same company that manufactures the American League ball, but it is supposed to be a trifle slower.

The best pitchers in the National League are curve ball chchers, while the hurling aces of the Harridge circuit are speed ll artists. It is much more difficult for a batter to connect with curve ball in the spring than it is for him to paste a fast ball a 'e. One must get his batting eye before he can successfully hit ve ball pitching.

The chief reason for the larger number of home runs hit in American League is probably the fact the younger organiza- has better batters. If you permit me to have Ruth, Gehrig l Foxx for my home run team, you can take your puck of the t of baseball.

Incidentally Foxx, who is here with the Athletics, intends to ak Ruth's record of 60 home runs set up in 1927. Last year ımy collected 58 home runs, which is a record for a right nded batter. Foxx already has two home runs this season. So s Ruth. Babe's legs, however, are certain to give him trouble fore the season ends. He does not figure to play in as many mes as Foxx.

Ruth secretly wonders how he has managed to play regularly so many years. Babe never forgets to duck when old Father e makes a pass at him.

RECORD FIELD EXPECTED FOR DERBY

Louisville, Ky., April 24 (AP)—With the Kentucky Derby just two weeks off, events of the training campaign now in full swing indicate that a record field may go to the post in the 59th running of the $50,000 added stake at Churchill Downs May 6.

The field probably will contain more class than any Derby field of recent years. And, for the first time in many years, a filly or two has excellent prospects.

W. R. Coe's Ladysman remains the favorite, but the stock of Adolphe Pons' Swivel, dubbed a "female twenty grand," because of her ability to come from behind and overtake the leaders in the stretch, took a decided advance when she scored a victory over a band of formful colts at Havre de Grace Saturday.

In addition to Ladysman, W. R. Coe owns the other Derby nominees, Pomponious and Pompoleon, both sons of the great sire, Pompey. Other winning Derby nominees at Havre were Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Poppyman, the Wheatley Stable's Utopian and the Sagamore Stable's Parity.

To match the performance of these eastern contenders the Lexington meeting which closed Saturday produced two victorious nominees which may threaten the whip hand conceded the East in this year's entries. These are Calumet Farm's Warren, Jr., and J. C. Milam's Captain Red.

TERROR PACES MERRY-GO-ROUND

FRANZ DUELBERG

FRANZ DUELBERG

Terror paced the six-day bike race at the Garden soon after the opening of the race at 10 o'clock last night, for bursting tires spilled several riders, causing painful injuries. At top, a rider flashes past as attendants rush to aid Franz Duelberg, hurled from the track by a tire blowout. Duelberg was taken to his bunk, where Dr. Gately repaired the injuries. Did Duelberg quit? NO. And early this a. m. the Duelberg-Winter team was leading the parade!

DR. G. LYNDE GATELY

ORIOLES BACK AT I. L. PEAK

New York, April 24 (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles, taking their place once more as the mighty men of the International league, dominated the pitching for the week and a half of play from the start of the season up through Saturday's games.

In that time the Orioles racked up an unbeaten record of nine straight games, slammed out 96 hits and scored 61 runs, 14 of them by the home run route. At the same time they got good enough pitching and fielding to hold their opponents to 30 runs.

Newark's champion Bears and the Rochester Red Wings second and third respectively, displayed fine defensive records.

DOOLEY HEADS CAN-AM LOOP

New York, April 24 (AP)—Farrell E. Dooley of Providence was elected president secretary and treasurer of the Canad-an-American Hockey League at the annual meeting here. Tentative plans for operation next season were drawn up.

The regular franchises members—Boston, Providence, New Haven and Philadelphia, all were represented.

The Quebec representatives asked for full franchise rights in the loop but were refused.

Dooley revealed that negotiations also were under way for the return to the league of Springfield.

Tribe Goes After Phil Scalps

Special to Boston American

Philadelphia, Pa., April 24. The Boston Braves make their first appearance of the season here this afternoon, opening a three-game series with Burt Shotton's slashing Phillies.

The Sextons were the season's 41 major league clubs to chalk up their first 1933 victory, for there's been nothing now to cheer them since they entered the N. tory column. In fact, they've been so fast that no opponent has been able to catch them.

TRIBE ON VICTORY TRAIL.

After dropping the only three games they managed to play of their scheduled first ten, they took two in a row from the Giants and handed the Dodgers a licking in Brooklyn yesterday to come home with a three-game winning streak.

The McKechniemen a initial start and defeat was turned in on the Polo Grounds. On that occasion John Burns pitched a two-hit shutout and the five hits and two tallies his mates made off "Hi Ca" Betts were more than enough to scalp the Tribe.

In their second game against Brooklyn and in their third start against the Giants in New York the Bush athletes were still helpless with the stick. Especially was this true in the Gotham contest when 13 of them fanned before Carl Hubbell.

BRANDT STOPS DODGERS

Since then though their hitting has been hard and timely, and their pitching has remained expellent.

Ed Brandt, southpaw ace, was the hero of the visitors' Sabbath victory over in Flatbush. He gave only three hits and handed Walter Beck, prize rookies of the Dodgers his first defeat 2 to 1. This pair staged a duel in Boston last Wednesday, and Beck won out by the same score.

Earl Clark, who replaced Wally Berger in centerfield on Saturday, and made three hits, continued his fine hitting, getting two out of three, and knocking in a run. Dick Gyselman, rookie third sacker, distinguished himself with a timely triple.

DUELBERG IS HURT; PAL HOPS IN TO PACE PACK

By GEORGE GRIMM

Boston's newest merry-go-round, the international six-day bike race, maintained its dizzy pace this morning, with the team of Charley Winter and Franz Duelberg, German duo, out in front.

The crash of exploding tires and severe injuries to Duelberg soon after the start of the grind shook up a rather lethargic crowd when it attended the opening of the race, and an almost hysterical pitch of excitement was maintained through the early hours of the morning.

The fans stayed until a surprisingly late hour, and even then all the customers didn't quit. Quite a few came in the wee hours of the morning and liked the pastime so much that they stayed until well after sun-up.

Fred Spencer and Jimmy Walthour, one of America's favorite pairs, were second, and the George Dempsey-Jack Sheehan team held third place as press time approached, but none of those three teams had any guarantee that they would hold the positions.

Frequent jamming pepped up the race and none of the teams seemed out of the fight.

The injury to Duelberg early in the race was appreciated. Whirling around a corner Franz pitched to the infield, tangled up with his bike. The riders' feet are strapped to the pedals, so when one spills the machine goes right along, increasing the peril to the racer.

Other riders continued to whiz along, while attendants aided Duelberg to his cot. There Dr. G. Lynde Gately ministered to the victim while Winter hastened to take up the fight.

On the whole the race shapes up as a brilliant sports tiklein. Thrills are plentiful with riders blazing around the 10-lap to the mile track at an amazing clip. This novel sports event at the Garden should draw record crowds, before the mad whirl concludes, next Saturday night.

B. U. NINE FACES 3 STRONG FOES

If Boston University's nine can come through this week without becoming demoralized, according to Coach John Harmon, the team should have success the rest of the season. For, in four days, the Terriers face three of the best college nines in this section.

Wednesday B. U. meets Holy Cross at Worcester; Thursday, Tufts is the opponent at Nickerson Field; and Saturday, Boston College makes a fitting climax at Nickerson Field.

The big problem for Coach Harmon will be his mound selections. He does not care to send any of His twirlers the full route if he can avoid it. The weather has retarded his flingers greatly.

'Learn to Swim' Drive on at Boston Pools

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

"Women and children first."

The old sea rule governs the launching of the City of Boston's Learn to Swim Campaign which starts at the two big municipal baths today.

Instructors Tim Cummings and Frank Rooney will devote their first efforts to the Mothers. The swimming semester opens with instructions for the Mothers' classes at 2.15 to 2.45 this afternoon. Girls and other women have a class from 7 to 7.30 this evening, and business and working women have a special class from 8 to 8.30 o'clock.

Three periods have been set aside for men and boys on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. The two municipal baths will be given over to instruction periods for women and girls on Mondays and Thursdays.

EXPERT INSTRUCTORS

Tim Cummings, the swimming champion, will supervise the instructions at the Curtis Hall bath on Jamaica Plain, and Frank Rooney, a famous lifeguard, with many rescues to his credit, will direct affairs at the Sabot street baths in Roxbury.

The two big municipal pools are among the cleanest, most sanitary and best kept in the world. Each is 75 feet by 35 feet. They are cleaned by a water vacuum apparatus, which removes every bit of sediment, and are sterilized with a chlorine solution that kills bacteria.

WATER TESTED

The water was tested and examined by Dr Karl R. Bailey and Fred Hartlett, the Health Department bacteriologist, this morning and pronounced free from impurities. Further tests will be made twice a week. No person is allowed to enter the tank without first having a soap bath and their feet bathed in a chorine solution which prevents athletes foot and other infections that invariably croup up during the bathing season.

If enough interest is taken in the free course of swimming at the two enclosed pools courses for instruction will be opened at the bath-ng houses when the outdoor season opens.

Fighting Popular In Russia of Czars. Village Folks Battled in Snow.

—By BILL CORUM—

New York, April 24 (1:45 A. M.)—At the wrestling matches in the 71st Armory the other evening a well-dressed gentleman in one of the forward rows was having fun for himself putting the ?? on the show.

"Fake!" he would yell; "Phoney! Such easy money for them bums. I myself, know which one is going to win. Take 'em away. Why don't you big stiffs turn square and get yourself a perk and shoot? Phooey again."

This went on through two or three bouts, with nobody resigning by shooting, although they were very good bouts. Eventually, however, it grew monotonous and a fan in the near the heckler turned on him and inquired:

"If you think it's such easy money and all a fake, why don't you go up there and do it yourself?"

"No-o," said the little Hebrew, wagging his head dolefully, "It's against Hitler's orders."

TOLSTOI INTERVIEWED

Interviewer: Count Ilya? You talented and entertaining son of the famous Russian novelist and relation M.Dst, I asked him about sports in Russia.

The count said that in the old days they used to have a lot of fist fighting in the one-time land of the Czars. The entire population of a community would meet in the village common, where the babies would fight babies, the bigger boys the bigger boys, and the grown men the grown men. All the evil in the snow, to make it healthier one presumes.

I asked him about baseball.

"Yes," he replied, "we originated your famous game of baseball and when I was a boy we used to play it in the coldest weather."

So far our own big league teams, for that matter as those of us who attended the Giants' home opening at the Polo Grounds discovered.

The script of the Count Tolstoi interview was prepared with the assistance of, I believe, Miss Dixie Tighe—pronounced tie, as in tie,—of the International News Service, and a very good job she did of it, too, as she goes with all her assignments.

COUNT INTERESTING

I had gone over there to talk over some business with Bradley Kelly, and still don't know how it happened to have been brought in on it although it was an honored pleasure.

You find out little enough about a man from a one hour and previously prepared interview, but if Count Tolstoi is not a most interesting man he belies both his looks and what little he did have to say.

Also at Wright and Ditson was entertaining person, Mrs. Cornelius Sheekman.

"Shiek," said Mrs. Beeckman, "is either Polly Tunney's birthday or Shakespeare's. I can never remember which."

"No doubt just an association of ideas," put in the wisecracking Mr. Kelly.

German L. T. A. Cup Team Minus Prenn

Berlin, April 24 (AP)—The German Lawn Tennis Association today selected a Davis Cup tennis team consisting of Gottfried Von Cramm, E. Sommer, G. Jaenecke and F. Kuhlmann. The German team will play its first round matches against Egypt at Wiesbaden May 5.

Yin Cramm is ranked second to Daniel Prenn in Germany, and Sommer, Nourney and Jaenecke are listed jointly for No. 3. Kuhlmann is not ranked among the first nine.

The Association recently announced that Prenn would not be named to the team because he is a Jew.

France Conquers Spain at Soccer, 1-0

Paris, April 24 (AP)—France defeated Spain's national soccer team, 1 to 0, in a closely contested match, the French victory broke Spain's string of four successive victories.

Nicolas scored the only goal of the game, near the end of the first half. Spain generally had the edge on offensive play, but could not break through to score.

KLINE FINDS VICTORY KEY AT FENWAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Big Bob Kline is strutting around today wearing a smile as broad as his massive back. He's finally learned the secret of winning a ball game.

Up to 21 hours ago, the young Fenway giant doubted that this or the thing could be done, as far as he was concerned. And who couldn't blame him.

He had worked in four games against the Yanks and Senators, hurled six innings and permitted only two singles and not a run. And the Sox had been returned the winners on two of those occasions. Yet all Robert had received for his efforts had been honorable mention.

The trouble, Junior now knows, was that he hadn't faced the Athletics.

For on the Sabbath he turned in a victory, 7 to 5, over the Mackmen which was doubly sweet since it was the first scored by Kline for the club at home this season.

JUNIOR GETS CREDIT

Junior neither started nor finished the tilt. In fact, he was officially out of it when the issue was settled. But he was credited with the win and richly deserved it.

When he rushed to Henry Johnson's rescue with one out in the fourth, the A.s were leading by two runs and had the bases full. When he retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth he had allowed only one single and not a run and the score was tied.

All the same, the Sox had to go ahead for good in the eighth for Junior to chalk up the win. So Friberg was sent up to hit with the bases loaded. Bernie, after it looked as though he had been farmed by Rube Walberg, pushed a lazy ankle between third and short, chasing home two runs.

Bob Weiland threw third strike by Jimmy Foxx and Bob Johnson that they never saw the while the tieing runs were waiting to be rescued from first and second, in the final frame.

Henry Johnson, the A.s greatest nemisis when he was a Yankee, was no puzzle to them as a Sox Hander and a three-run lead in the first, he blew it in the third when he was found for nine runs.

WAS FIGHTING

In other years, the Sox would have been tickled that Johnson was still a member of the Fens this season. Marty McManus has material in the wood shed and, as he employs it wisely. He used the right-handed hitting Fothergill and Weiland in place of Kelley and Watwood, left-handed swingers, against Walberg and had Friberg, when a right-handed hitter was expected in a pinch.

This trio of second-stringers proved the difference between victory and defeat. Seeds doubled and scored the tieing run in the sixth and Fothergill singled with the eighth coming uprising with a single.

This newly acquired secondary strength will win plenty of games for the Fenway flock this season.

Bob Kline adds that he won't know that he's acquired the knack but Ivy Paul Andrews, who'll face George Earnshaw in the second game this p. m., says Junior will have to wait until tomorrow, at the earliest, to add to his victory string.

A Rabbit Proves Too Fast for a Philly Elephant in Race at Fens

FRANK HIGGINS

RABBIT WARSTLER

Here was one case when a Rabbit, one Mr. Warstler of the Red Sox, showed that an Elephant hasn't a chance on an infield race. Rabbit beat out a hunt to gain first, and scampered safely to third on Johnson's single. Speedy third baseman Higgins of the Athletics couldn't touch Warstler, who scored soon after, on an infield error. Which helped no end in the Sox's 7 to 5 win. So the customers went home very happy.

2 Harvard Crew Jobs Open; Race Saturday

With the first regatta of the year only five days away, two berths still remain unsettled in the Harvard varsity boat. These seatings must be made this afternoon or tomorrow if the Crimson is to make a creditable showing against Princeton and Tech on Saturday.

Coach Charlie Whiteside expects to name the candidates to fill the number 3 seat left open by the graduation of Louis Perkins last June and the berth vacated by the illness of Ben Bacon.

[illegible] not look like the best thing on the river this week. Tried and true veterans from crosswain to bow, the Harvard boat is likely to lead both the Engineers and the Tigers.

Tech was severely trounced by Navy on last Saturday, but Princeton has not yet launched such like Harvard will be rowing its first race of the season.

TWO GAMES FOR NINE

The Harvard baseball and track teams look forward to busy programs this week. The nine with two engagements, one a league contest, and Eddie Farrell's track squad with the Greater Boston Interscholastics at the Stadium open their real home seasons.

The Mitchell team will encounter Amherst at Soldiers Field on Wednesday and then meets Columbia on Saturday afternoon.

Harvard is officially tied for first place with the Lions, with a pair of wins in the two games played and the Saturday game will settle the early season race for the leadership.

CRIMSON IN TRACK MEET

The Crimson track men will be after another G. B. I. championship when they entertain Boston College, M. I. T., Northeastern, Boston University, Tufts at the Stadium on Friday and Saturday.

A year ago the Crimson varsity was at Princeton for a dual meet with the Tigers and only individual entries were made in the Intercollegiates. This spring the G. B. I. meet will receive Harvard's undivided attention and as a result the Crimson may dethrone Boston College defending champion.

McGill, Demetroff Tilt on Mat Tonight

Pat McGill and Boris Demetroff meet tonight at the Chelsea Armory, where Battery H will stage its weekly wrestling carnival under the direction of Captain Perera.

McGill and Demetroff are scheduled for a finish go, two falls out of three.

There is a semifinal between Rudy Lerro and Alex Anderson, a special between Buck Weaver and John Friberg.

MISS RAWLS IS A. A. U. QUEEN

A. U. swimming championships here.

Miss Rawls, who has yet to celebrate here 16th birthday, nosed out Leonore Kight of Homestead Pa., Olympic star, by one point, to take the individual scoring honors of the meet.

EAGLES, BATES DUEL FRIDAY

The Boston College baseball team today settles down to prepare for what promises to be its opening game, with Bates College on Friday at the Heights.

The Eagles will be able to play on the regular diamond this week for the first time this season, Hetherington has been fielding and batting in Soxer layout, Jack Ryder [illegible] for the Chestnut Hill team, will get down to business when he and Coach Dill his entrants for the interscholastics at the Harvard Stadium at the end of the week.

Dempsey Held Crown as Ring Boo Catcher

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1933, by International Newsreel, Inc.)

In the light of his present popularity and hold upon the imagination of the public, it is interesting to recall that Jack Dempsey, in his day, was the object of more boos than any other individual in many years. He was the nine-boo man of his time.

Jack Shirkey, the present heavyweight champion, perhaps feels that he is entitled to serious consideration as a [illegible] But Shirkey is not Dempsey was at that respect.

Dempsey, as has been said before, is expected from the Atlantic to the Pacific. From the headwaters of the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico.

TOOK BOOING LA'RELS

He was booed by his largest assemblage that ever booed one man —the 79,000 citizens who were gathered at Soldier Thirty Acres to see him fight M. Georges Carpentier.

The booing of Dempsey started after he won the hea vyweight title from Jess Willard in 1919 and up to that time the popu subject of American booing was ed Jess.

Dempsey was acquitted and acquitted. But the murmur of booing that began rising with his victory over Willard now swelled to a mighty roar that followed him.

JACK A PHILOSOPHER

At first Dempsey was bewildered He didn't know that the booing went with the title. When he realized this, Dempsey became philosophical. Gene Tunney, when he succeeded to the booing, got sore about it. Dempsey never did.

He just grinned and bore it.

Then, overnight, folks suddenly began cheering Dempsey. His first real popularity was established when he got a heartwarming good hrking from Gene Tunney.

His great comeback against Shirkey further endeared him to the ex-boners. His second battle with Tunney and another defeat, definitely fixed his status with the populace as our first cheer-receiver.

And as such he flourished down to this day, although I understand that certain ominous rumbles in Boston argue that Jack might well dispense with touring with Schmeling and get back in taking cheers

QUINCY, LYNN PLAYOFF SET

The Clan McGregor soccer eleven of Quincy and the Riversides of Lynn battled to a 1 to 1 tie in the state cup semifinal game at Lincoln Park and as a result will have to replay the contest next Sunday.

The game was listlessly fought throughout both periods, and the 2000 fans present received few thrills.

The opening goal came after 15 minutes of play in the second period and it was an accident which caused it, Archie Allison of the McGregor defenders the ball into his own net to give the Riversides the lead.

A few minutes later Jimmy Lyons sent in a slow grounder which Schegal Lynn goalie, misjudged and the ball landed in the net to deadlock the contest.

St Pius Club of Lynn earned its way into the finals of the Mayor James M. Curley cup competition by gaining a 3 to 0 defeat on the Bird & Son eleven at East Walpole which, coupled with its 5 to 1 victory of a week ago, made the total score 8 to 1 in its favor for the two game series.

The Six Base Baer soccer eleven of St Louis won the National championship and Dewar cup by taking the New York American title camp by a 2 to 1 score at Starlight Park, New York.

Last week the Six Base eleven defeated the Americans 1 to 0 at St Louis thus making it two straight in the series.

N. Y. Dinghies Top Foes on Charles

New York dinghy skippers scored a clean sweep in the match-es on the Charles river for the William U Swan prizes under the direction of the Boston Dinghy Club.

The Zero, owned and sailed by William W. Swan, carried off top honors in class B with three other New York boats following.

FINAL MEDAL PLAY TODAY FOR W. G. A.

W. G. A. Slate

Southern at South Shore.
Eastern at The Country Club.
Western at Brae Burn.
Northern at Vesper.

By BILL GRIMES

In the third and final Women's Golf Association medal play tournament today, the Southern District is at the South Shore Country Club, at West Hingham, Eastern is out at the Country Club, Wellesley, paying its initial visit to Brae Burn and Northern foils at Vesper.

Although soggy and slow the courses are in far better condition than a week ago, because of the wind and the dry weather.

UPSETS MISSING

Nothing startling occurred during the two medal play tournaments staged by the W. G. A. last week. The veterans as a general rule led their respective districts, Miss Margaret Curtis, Essex County, duplicating her 1932 performances, has topped the Northern District field, in both tourneys.

Miss Dorothy Richards and Miss Martha Brewer, Weston, have divided the Western District honors, Miss Deborah Verry Kittansett and Miss Mary Parkinson, Dedham Polo and Country Club have featured for Southern. Mrs. Heard F Prunaeri, Jr., of Charles River has been the most consistent among the contenders for the Eastern District team.

As Mrs. L. Q White, Cohasset, Miss Frances Stebbins and Mrs. W Iter Tufts, Tatnuck have not played in the qualifying rounds, or transferred to another district, Southern's chances of successfully defending its championship are slim. Neither Mrs. White nor Mrs. Tufts have played in either of the medal play tournaments and so are ineligible for team match competition while Miss Stebbins is registered from Brae Burn and therefore is playing with the Western District.

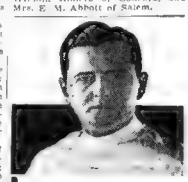
EASTERN POWERFUL

Although it has only five clubs from which to draw its material, against from 20 to 25 for the other three districts, Eastern will be a serious contender for the championship.

Last year, the Eastern District finished in the runner up position, by winning four out of its six matches. Mrs. Henry P. Kinsley, Jr., Mrs. W C Quimby and Miss Dorothy Hunter, three of the best players in the state did not play for Eastern a year ago. Mrs. Prunaeri was forced out of golf by an appendicitis operation, while Miss Hunter was attending Boston University and could not take her place in the line up.

With Mrs. Prunaeri, Miss Hunter and Mrs. Quimby available, Eastern will be formidable.

Northern and Western will have stronger teams than last season, because of Miss Frances Stebbins and the acquisition of Miss Jane Broadwell, together with the improvement Miss Thomas Comins has displayed, will strengthen Western. Northern will be strong because of Miss Hilliard Merz, who will play from Andover, Mrs William Anders of Concord, and Mrs. E. M. Abbott of Salem.



THOMAS STOPS FALLING HAIR

Hair in your comb and brush means that your scalp is not physically able to withstand the ravishing attacks of the baldness producing germs. Unless you immediately rid your scalp of these causes of abnormal hair fall, you are bound to become bald.

Thomas treatment overcomes the causes of falling hair and gently stimulates the tiny glands deep in the scalp, which cause hair to grow normally. When Thomas treatment stops hair fall stops, dandruff ends and hair grows again as Nature intended it should. Thomas treatment is reliable, dignified and proved by more than 16 years of success. Call today for a free scalp examination and learn more about this modern, precise method of scientific hair culture.

PURES TILT AT ARENA

SOCK SALESMEN START TITLE ARGUMENTS

By JACK CONWAY

Amateur ring kings from all parts of the United States will battle for the A. A. U. ring titles at the title tournament which gets underway at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Arena.

Bill Kenney, president of the New England A. A. U., says 120 of the best of the simon pure stars will compete. The battling will last until 12:30 a. m. The championship show will be held on three nights, the finals being held on Wednesday evening.

The law now requires that amateur boxing shows end at 12:30 a. m. The last time the national championships were held here the trial bouts on the opening night did not end until 4 a. m. It was a terrific strain on immature youngsters. The legislature passed a law ending this inhuman system.

Even with less hours of boxing the fans will witness more action this year. This is because only sectional champions and runners-up will compete in the nationals. In former years, many "joy riders" entered the tournament.

There will be bouts in all of the championship classes, namely at 112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds and in the heavyweight division.

There is considerable interest in the appearance of the three Indian boxers who will do their stuff for the Kansas City team.

STARTS THRONE DRIVE

Mrs. C. F. Eaton, of the Wellesley links contingent, is one of the noted members of the W. G. A. who is starting her drive for the association honors. An able golfer, she may be the next state champion. The W. G. A. holds its third and final medal play tourney today.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

Picking up right where they left off last season, the Senators handed the Yankees their first defeat of the season in the initial clash of these American League pennant contenders.

The New Yorkers ran away with the race last season and beat all other rivals by a wide margin, but the best they could do against the Solons was break even. A two-run rally in the ninth, featured by a triple by Manush and a single by Rice, both pinch-hitting, stopped the Yanks' seven-game win streak.

Hard Luck Tommy

You couldn't blame Tommy Bridges, young Detroit hurler, if he went insane everytime he heard anybody mention Washington. Tommy pitched a one-hit shoutout victory over the Browns on the Sabbath. It was the second time in his big league career that he failed by one to get into baseball's hall of fame. And both times it was a capital product that halted him. Yesterday it was Sammy West, purchased from the Solons by the Browns this past winter. Sammy singled in the eighth.

You were told in this corner a few days ago to watch Ted Lyons of the White Sox this season. Well, Theodore did plenty worth watching as he was beating Cleveland, 4 to 1, yesterday. Coming back after a three-hit shutout win last week, the Chisox ace held the Indians to two safeties and led his mates with the stick with a home run and two singles.

Scoring three runs in the last two innings, the Reds came from behind to nose out the Cubs, 4 to 3, and hand Lon Warneke his first defeat in three starts this season.

Sox Get Breaks

The Red Sox could have complained plenty about the umpiring on Saturday last, but they certainly didn't receive any of the worst of it from the arbiters in the Sunday game with the A's. Bob Seeds was called safe at the plate in the eighth on a play that could have been called the other way without an argument, while Bernie Friberg probably will never again this season have such a good pitch called a ball as he took with two strikes on him just before producing the blow that won the game in that frame.

Wishing will not fill your vacancies—advertising will. Use the Classified Rental colums of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser consistently, if you want consistent good results.

BOYS' COURT TITLE FINALS ON TONIGHT

Twelve of the 185 teams originally entered in the 10th annual amateur basketball tournament of the Boys' Clubs of Boston meet in the final games of the tourney tonight at the Eben D. Jordan Memorial gymnasium, Charlestown.

The President's Trophy, donated by Nathaniel F. Ayer, president of the board of directors of the Boys' Clubs, will be presented to the winning team of one of the six divisions which in the judgment of officials has displayed the highest traits of sportsmanship throughout the tourney.

Presentation of the trophy will be made by Huntington R. "Tack" Hardwick, chairman of the tournament judiciary committee.

The games will be staged on the main court. The schedule for the championship contests which will start at 5:30 o'clock and the respective classes:

FRISBY TO LEAD WHITE SHIRTS IN MIGHTY PROGRAM

WASHINGTON — Congressman Horace Walpole Frisby today offered himself as the self-appointed leader of a new and mighty force in the nation's affairs—the American White Shirts.

"You want a dictator," declared Frisby. "Very well. Here I am. My first order is that all my admirers follow the leader. Beginning tomorrow, every Frisby enthusiast will be known as an American White Shirt. I want all red-blooded citizens to pull out their shirt tails and wear them to the knee, as the official uniform, together with a comfortable pair of old tennis shoes to ease the feet. Our symbol will be 'The Clean Slate.' I suggest that all White Shirts carry the symbol raised aloft in the right hand at all times, except when signing CHECKS for dues, etc."

Mister Frisby attracted immediate attention with his coup by walking up and down the main streets with his shirt tails exposed. Tomorrow he will rest, and Wednesday he will explain the official salute.

The Bankers' Turn Now

Workers Should Not Contribute All the City Economies

Now that Mayor Curley has enforced a policy of economy upon the city of Boston in response to the demands of the bankers, it is up to the bankers to respond in kind.

They can contribute their share to the economy they demand of others by affording the city a low rate of interest on the borrowings the city must make in anticipation of its tax receipts.

The city's economy policy so far will be paid for, of course, by the city employes. They will sustain a wage decrease of $5,000,000 annually. These include the teachers who educate our citizens of the future, the policemen and firemen who afford protection to life and property and all the others who serve their city with loyalty and efficiency.

We sympathize with Mayor Curley's declaration that the donation to economy should not come from the workers alone.

The city must borrow $30,000,000 shortly. A reduction of only one per cent in the interest rates charged by the banks on this sum would be the equivalent of an entire month's pay for 2500 city workers at the rate of $5 per day. What a saving to the taxpayers that would be!

We could not find justification for the rate of almost six per cent charged by the banks in their last loans to the city. State Treasurer Hurley was borrowing money for the State at that time at an interest rate some two per cent lower. The bankers' statement that city securities find a poor market and that they must remain in the banks as frozen assets seemed to have been only an excuse. They wouldn't freeze much firmer at four per cent.

Mayor Curley and the banks appear to have found a basis of co-operation so far as this policy of economy goes. Now let us see to what extent the bankers will contribute their share of it.

Beer's First Two Weeks

More Money, Less Drunkenness, Some Racketeering

The first two weeks of legal beer have completely justified the hopes of the "wets" and completely wiped out the predictions of the "drys."

It poured several million dollars into Federal, State and municipal treasuries.

It put hundreds of thousands of men to work.

And most important of all, it led to a DECREASE in drunkenness instead of an increase.

Figures from all States which permit the sale of the 3.2 beverage are uniformly favorable.

In not one city which has reported have arrests for drunkenness gone up.

In most, the arrests have gone down.

As additional States legalize beer, this improvement in the crime figures will continue.

There will also be increased employment, and increased revenue, but the march toward law and order is the best reason for authorizing beer in those parts of the country which have not yet authorized it.

There is evidence, however, that the illegal brewers, the beer runners and the other racketeers connected with the old traffic will not give up without a struggle.

In New Jersey the other day the killing of two "mobsters" showed that the underworld war to control a share of the business still goes on.

There will be more killings, here and elsewhere, for the same reason.

Hence it is incumbent upon the Federal Government, aided by State and local authorities, to make a genuine, relentless and effective clean-up of the gangs which are seeking to "muscle-in" on the legalized field.

Unless that is done, the chief benefits we are reaping from the change in the Volstead Act will be lost, and the abuses of the days before April 8 will continue.

A Magnificent Leader

Let Us Pray That Roosevelt May Carry On

Sunday, April 30, throughout this country will be observed as President's Day.

In the churches special prayers will be offered for President Roosevelt.

The American people, through their prayers, will offer their compliment to the magnificent leadership he has given them in their hour of stress.

The grace of Divine Providence will be asked that his strength may remain firm, his health unimpaired and his strong will resolute to carry on the great task to which he has set himself so valiantly and determinedly.

The American people have come to believe that Providence has been extremely kind to them in affording a brave leader to guide their country at every critical juncture in their history.

The American people, therefore, through their prayers, will express their gratitude that Divine Providence has afforded them President Roosevelt in this crisis which has required both the skill of statesmanship and compassionate concern for his countrymen.

President Roosevelt, on the day of his inauguration, turned his face to Heaven and asked for Divine guidance. He manifested a spiritual intellectuality which expresses itself in his deep desire to abate the suffering of his fellow man.

Whether you attend church or not, and you will be better for it if you do attend, join on Sunday in the paean of praise and thanksgiving that will be sent to the throne of the Almighty on this day dedicated to the President of the United States.

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire."

And the sincere desire of the American people is that President Roosevelt may move forward on the beautiful path which he has taken with undaunted courage.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, April 24—Diary of a modern Pepys: Out and hallooed to Octavus Roy Cohen in such a grave study he did not look up. So, breakfasting on a tasty ham Ben Finney sent, and walking to Irvin Cobb's, where pleasant discourse with Thomas J. Watson and Matthew Carney mighty captains of industry.

Home to slit my mail and notes from Allene Stone, Fred's wife. Blyth Daly, Jack Dempsey and Michael Arlen. Then talking by phone to Watterson Rothacker in Beverly and much argle-bargle. So a minute to see the gadding Frazier Hunt, but in such a fusty humor did not tarry.

Breaking bread in the evening with Colette and George Armsby where came the Edward R. Tinklers, the Reginald Newtons and the Jack Johnstons. Home at midnight and the stars so pretty to see drove to the Hudson and idled along the docks watching a big liner berth.

Summer again brings out the toddling old men under sun umbrellas on the croquet grounds of Central Park. Many come in the mid-afternoon and remain until the frogs begin fluting sadly in the south lake. Now and then a juvenescent touch is provided by such croquetists as the younger Harpo Marx and the elfin Alexander Woolcott.

* * *

While watching venerable croquet players there came through a slit in the shrubbery an oldish fellow whose wallowing walk suggested a casual of the sea. He dropped on a bench t my side, slipped a cutty of tobacco in his cheek, watched the players awhile, then snorted: "Hell's bells!" And walked on. His attitude was thorough disgust. He seemed to think it sissy stuff.

And down a green meander of the park I passed a figure so strikingly the image of Mary Manning during her professional years I was startled. She is one of the most remembered actresses of juniper days. During her sway I sat in the old Coates House lobby in Kansas City, a gawk from the creek trying to act like a townsie, to watch her return after seeing her at the theater. Passing a cushioned chair in which I huddled, she exclaimed: "I've forgotten my key!" I made it to the clerk in an eyelash and handed it to her with flushed earnestness. "How gracious!" murmured in that faraway Such a contact, of course, was of no consequence whatever to her, but was one of life's juicy adventures to me. And I've been a fool for "gracious" ever since.

In all life's affectations there is nothing so awesome as a monocle. With all his charm, George Arliss would not be half so captivating minus the single eyeglass. De Segurola, of the opera, among the first on Broadway to sport the monocle, was laughed at, but it was a passport to homes t which many other singers were denied. I saw the tug of the monocle stressed at the Casino last evening. He sat alone in full dress splendor with a glass screwed into his eye with the fixity of a chalet teetering on a Pyrenean crag. No one talked to dinner companions. They just stared at the monoclist who did not eat but, in the manner of Chekov's hero, "partook of food."

Just Folks

I Know What's Coming

When I'm a grandpa I shall say:
"Be watchful for the rainy day!

"Be full content small plot to dig
And don't attempt to grow too big.

"Who climbs too high is apt to fall.
Be satisfied with profits small;

"Be honest; be content to work—
In speculation dangers lurk.

"Though roads seem smooth, don't go too fast.
Remember boom times never last."

And they will wisely smile and say:
"The poor old fogey's had his day!

"He's just a feeble good old scout
Who knows not what it's all about.

"Poor Grandpop still believes that we Are back in Nineteen-thirty-three.

"He thinks a crash is due, but, oh,
The poor old fellow doesn't know!"

Listen, World!

About Life-as-Is

SHOULD YOUNG PEOPLE learn to Face Facts?

Should they be given school courses on American-Life-As-It-Is—the seamy side as well as the scalloped ruffles—or should they, at least, until they're over 20, hear just the Pretty Patter?

Elsie Robinson

A lot of Angry Parents would like to know. So would some Peeved Professors.

The Angry Parents live in a representative American community. They're most prosperous professional people of rather conservative tastes, though they pride themselves on being broad-minded. There is a fine Junior College in this community, which the youngsters of 16 to 18 attend. The Peeved Professors teach in this college—and the row started in a Philosophy Course.

The Professor who heads this department believes that future voters should face facts. To this end he has devised a questionnaire based on problems presented by the youngsters themselves; and each and every one of these questions is giving these "broad-minded" parents violent attacks of the jitters.

"Free Love! Eugenics! Divorce! The 'single standard'! Who ever heard of sweet, innocent children discussing such subjects in school?" cry the parents in horrified unison.

"But they've chosen their own problems; and they're meeting these problems every day of their lives. Then why shouldn't they discuss them in school?" answer the equally irate Professors.

"Do you mean to say you'd encourage young people to discuss and criticize their own country, as well as all those other sordid facts?" retort the Parents.

"Why not?" reply the Professors. "It's THEIR country. They'll have to run it some day. Why shouldn't they learn the facts about it, sordid or otherwise?"

And so the battle's on. And now it's your turn. Here are some of the questions which have so horrified these prim and patriotic parents. (N. B. The between-line snorts of rage are parental quotes.)

Would YOU be horrified if such questions were asked of YOUR child; or would you be pleased and interested?

"Under what conditions is divorce ethically justified?"

(But suppose you believe it isn't ever justified?)

"What are the ethical arguments for and against birth control?

"From the ethical viewpoint, what are the eugenic responsibilities of society?"

(Discuss physiological and pathological problems before clear-eyed, innocent children? It's indecent!)

"What are the ethical arguments for single standards of conduct as between the sexes?

"To what extent is the church an ethical asset to the community?

"What are the ethical arguments for and against 'companionate' marriage?

"Are the Ten Commandments as ethically desirable today as in ancient times?"

(How dare we doubt it?!?!?!?!?)

"Would a dictatorship be the best form of government in the United States today?

"What should be done by society in the case of the unmarried father or mother?

"Wherein does the modern capitalistic system work injustice?

"Should large fortunes be inherited by those who have had no part in creating them?"

(But that sort of talk will teach our children to be "reds"!)

"From the ethical viewpoint, what are the evidences of governmental failure in the United States?

"Can 'My Country, right or wrong' but still My Country be ethically justified?

"What are the ethical arguments for prohibiting the teaching of religion in the public schools?"

Wise Sayings

When we cannot find contentment in ourselves, it is useless to seek it elsewhere.

Those who are incapable of committing great crimes do not easily suspect others of them.

We fear all things as mortals, and we desire all things as if we were immortals.

Still Plenty of Material for New Satire on Politics

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I AM INTERESTED IN THE REPORT from New York that the authors of the Pulitzer prize musical satire, "Of Thee I Sing," are writing a sequel to it, with the same characters and the same actors, which they hope to open in Boston next September. The piece is to deal with the second term of President Winterbottom and his Mary and Vice-President Bottomthrottle—beg pardon, Throttlebottom!—and the tentative title is "Let Them Eat Cake."

R. E. ROGERS

The hope of repeating a great success—and there have been few greater than "Of Thee I Sing"—springs eternal in the theatrical breast. One of the saddest comments on managerial intelligence is the fact that a marked success in any one genre will set the Broadway gentry to combing their scripts, sending out hurry calls to agencies, and hastily commissioning play confectioners with a "reputation" to do something as near like the success as possible, without risking a suit for plagiarism. Almost invariably the result will be a flop. The next big success, when it does arrive, will probably be something quite new and unexpected. Not actually "new," of course. It is probably as old as Pharoah, but of a sort that managers have been turning down steadily for a dozen seasons.

There have been, of course, successions of shows in much the same manner, that have been successful. Gilbert and Sullivan rang the bell perhaps half a dozen times, but too much repetition made their work stale and imitative, and their final attempts, after they had separated and in desperation teamed up again, were pitiful. Pixley and Luders did pretty well for several seasons before they petered out, while old Franz Lehar is apparently still going strong in Vienna, though with little repercussion over here. Reginald de Koven sought vainly for a successful successor to "Robin Hood," but its sequel, "Maid Marian," with the same characters, was perhaps the sorriest failure of the lot. The dice, I fear, are loaded against Messrs. Kaufmann and Ryskind and the Gershwin brothers.

Why It Was a Success

"Of Thee I Sing" was—and is—a natural. Probably it is useless to try to analyze the reasons for its success—except to say that it had everything—but one may try. In the first place, it came out in the fall of 1931, when the public was beginning to understand what the depression was all about and first began to feel alarmed. That summer marked the first serious public loss of faith in the administration, which involved a loss of faith in the political method generally.

During the Coolidge administration—and even during Harding's—we took our politics pretty casually. Certainly, politics was not to the average man the comic and discredited thing it became during the last year of Mr. Hoover's struggle with the Congress. It may be said that the American people's lack of respect for Washington reached a new—almost an all-time—low during the year following the first presentation of "Of Thee I Sing."

On the other hand, in 1932 the election was still in the offing. It had not yet become serious, a matter of partican heartburning and bad temper. If the piece had opened in the fall of 1932, with the public opinion resentfully and anxiously conscious that we were badly up against it, I wonder what the result would have been. Probably a success, but perhaps not such a happy, rollicking success as it gained.

One or two more points are not without interest. In 1932 Jimmy Walker was on the top of the wave. The public liked him, just as it liked his copy, the off-hand, care-free, song-and-dance man Wintergreen, as portrayed by Mr. Gaxton. The contrast between a jovial President who could sing and make a stab at dancing and the somewhat inarticulate and self-conscious figure in the White House was too marked not to be noticed. Also, Mr. Curtis had never been anything but a rather comic character—thanks largely to Mrs. Gann—and the public had no picture in its head to contradict Victor Moore's magnificent inanity.

The bottom had not yet completely dropped out of the Atlantic City bathing beauty contest. We were still in a mood to laugh at France, which had not yet earned the contemptuous resentment she now receives. Even then the public knew the Supreme Court largely by Mr. Hughes' whiskers and its habit of voting five to four.

Jokes Are Kept Ageless

The authors decided, and very cleverly, not to get their laughs out of too specific and topical jokes. They kept them general. The result is that after a full year and a half surprisingly few of the jokes fall flat. That alone makes me hope that possibly the authors may be able to repeat. Still there are many possibilities to consider. By the next fall the United States will either be well on the way to normalcy . . . or it will be flat on its back. No middle course seems possible. The present administration's policies are too sweeping and revolutionary to allow further drift. Either the upswing or collapse. If we collapse, the authors need not worry. Nobody will be going to the theater. There will be no theater to go to.

But what if the upswing is well under way? Then Mr. Roosevelt will be the Father of His Country. His personality and his policies will be sacred. Even Mr. Garner and the Senate and the Supreme Court will share in the reflected glory. We may not be in the mood for satire. Satire is the vocal expression of the feelings of a discontented people. Satire wedded to burlesque, often very witty, answers very well Sigmund Freud's definition of wit as an unconscious method of escaping the inner "censor" and saying things we otherwise wouldn't dare to admit to ourselves. In that definition lies the reason for the burbling gratitude with which the American people received "Of Thee I Sing."

One notion strikes me. The proposed title seems pretty acid. "Let Them Eat Cake" is associated in the popular mind with Marie Antoinette's indifference to the sufferings of the French people before the Revolution. Possibly Messrs. Kaufmann and Ryskind have in mind something about the bankers! Bankers on the stage have always been handled with gloves. They have sometimes been villainous—in a big way—but always dignified. What if the authors were to show us the powers behind our great metropolitan banks not as villains but as idiots—funny, feeble-minded fellers, like Mr. Throttlebottom.

Still Plenty of Material

I do not know. Nobody knows. All one can say is that if anybody can give us a successful successor to "Of Thee I Sing," its authors are the boys. The odds are against them, but what is that to such a gang of high-hearted cuckoos? Even if they cannot strike 10 twice, they have done something no other American theatrical group had ever succeeded in doing. They have shown us that the spirit of Gilbert and Sullivan is not embalmed in The Savoy and does not need the absurdities of old England for its fodder. The Comic Spirit, as Meredith put it, is always with us. Whenever it finds proper material to feed on, there it flourishes. And the Lord knows there is still plenty of material in these United States.
